The Department of Educational Administration (EDAD) at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln invites applications for doctoral assistantships.

The Department currently sponsors eight (8) graduate assistants. Up to four (4) doctoral assistantships will be available in EDAD, starting in Fall 2013. Assistantships are awarded to individuals who will study full-time on the UNL campus and are renewable for a period of up to four years. Each assistantship will provide a 10-month salary of $12,500. Summer salary is not guaranteed but may be available. A UNL graduate assistantship provides tuition remission of up to 12 credit hours in fall and spring semesters and 6 credit hours in summer sessions. The University portion of health insurance is provided as a fringe benefit and each graduate assistant will receive up to $1,000 per year to support attendance at professional conferences.

Position Responsibilities: Graduate assistantships are assigned to full-time faculty and are key members in increasing the research capacity of the Department. Graduate assistants will participate in all aspects of scholarly research, including conceptualization, data collection and analysis, and dissemination of results via conference presentations and publications. The opportunity to serve as a teaching assistant may be available based on the qualifications and interests of the candidate.

Qualifications: An individual must submit all necessary materials to be considered for admission as a doctoral student by February 1, 2013. Interest in an assistantship and the qualifications and experiences related to scholarly research should be included within the application materials for the degree program. Information about applying for doctoral programs can be found at http://cehs.unl.edu/edad/doctoral/appDeadlines.

Eligibility to work in the United State at the time of appointment is required. International applicants should consult the international programs office at their current university and at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln to confirm eligibility before applying for this assistantship.
