The Wood and the Mountain

When half way through the journey of our life
I found that I was in a gloomy wood, because the path which led aright was lost.
And ah, how hard it is to say just what this wild and rough and stubborn woodland was,
the very thought of which renews my fear!
So bitter 't is, that death is little worse;
but of the good to treat which there I found,
I 'll speak of what I else discovered there.
I cannot well say how I entered it, so full of slumber was I at the moment when I forsook the pathway of the truth;
but after I had reached a mountain's foot, where that vale ended which had pierced my heart with fear, I looked on high,
and saw its shoulders
mantled already with that planet's rays which leadeth one aright o'er every path.
Then quieted a little was the fear, which in the lake-depths of my heart had lasted throughout the night I passed so piteously.
And even as he who, from the deep emerged with sorely troubled breath upon the shore, turns round, and gazes at the dangerous water;
even so my mind, which still was fleeing on,
turned back to look again upon the pass which ne'er permitted any one to live.
When I had somewhat eased my weary body, o'er the lone slope I so resumed my way,
that e'er the lower was my steady foot.
Then lo, not far from where the ascent began,
a Leopard which, exceeding light and swift,
was covered over with a spotted hide,
and from my presence
did not move away;
nay, rather, she so hindered my advance,
that more than once I turned me to go back.
Some time had now from early morn elapsed,
and with those very stars the sun was rising that in his escort were, when Love Divine in the beginning moved those beauteous things;
I therefore had as cause for hoping well
of that wild beast with gaily mottled skin,
but not so, that I should not fear the sight,
which next appeared before me, of a Lion,
— against me this one seemed to be advancing with head erect and with such raging hunger, that even the air seemed terrified thereby -- and of a she-Wolf, which with every lust seemed in her leanness laden, and had caused many ere now to lead unhappy lives.
The latter so oppressed me with the fear that issued from her aspect, that I lost the hope I had of winning to the top.
And such as he is, who is glad to gain,
and who, when times arrive that make him lose, weeps and is saddened in his every thought;
such did that peaceless animal make me, he answered, when he saw me shedding tears, "if from this wilderness thou wouldst escape; for this wild beast, on whose account thou criest, alloweth none to pass along her way, but hinders him so greatly, that she kills; and is by nature so malign and guilty, that never doth she sate her greedy lust, but after food is hungrier than before. Many are the animals with which she mates, and still more will there be, until the Hound shall come, and bring her to a painful death. He shall not feed on either land or wealth, but wisdom, love and power shall be his food, and 'tween two Feltros shall his birth take place. Of that low Italy he 'll be the savior, for which the maid Camilla died of wounds, with Turnus, Nisus and Euryalus. And he shall drive her out of every town, till he have put her back again in Hell, from which the earliest envy sent her forth. I therefore think and judge it best for thee to follow me; and I shall be thy guide, and lead thee hence through an eternal place, where thou shalt hear the shrieks of hopelessness of those tormented spirits of old times, each one of whom bewails the second death; then those shalt thou behold who, though in fire, contented are, because they hope to come, where'er it be, unto the blessed folk; to whom, thereafter, if thou wouldst ascend, there 'll be for that a worthier soul than I. With her at my departure I shall leave thee, because the Emperor who rules up there, since I was not obedient to His law, wills none shall come into His town through me. He rules as emperor everywhere, and there as king; there is His town and lofty throne. O happy he whom He thereto elects!"

And I to him: "O Poet, I beseech thee, even by the God it was not thine to know, so may I from this ill and worse escape, conduct me thither where thou saidst just now, that I may see Saint Peter's Gate, and those whom thou describest as so whelmed with woe."

He then moved on, and I behind him kept.

2. The Mission of Virgil

Daylight was going, and the dusky air was now releasing from their weary toil all living things on earth; and I alone was making ready to sustain the war both of the road and of the sympathy, which my unerring memory will relate. O Muses, O high Genius, help me now! O Memory, that wrotest what I saw, herewith shall thy nobility appear! I then began: "Consider, Poet, thou that guidest me, if strong my virtue be, or e'er thou trust me to the arduous course. Thou sayest that the sire of Silvio entered, when still corruptible, the immortal world, and that while in his body he was there. Hence, that to him the Opponent of all ill was courteous, considering the great result that was to come from him, both who, and what, seems not unfitness to a thoughtful man; for he of fostering Rome and of her sway in the Empyrean Heaven was chosen as sire; and both of these, if one would tell the truth, were foreordained unto the holy place, where greatest Peter's follower hath his seat. While on this quest, for which thou giv'st him praise, he heard the things which of his victory the causes were, and of the Papal Robe. The Chosen Vessel went there afterward, to bring thence confirmation in the faith, through which one enters on salvation's path. But why should I go there, or who concedes it? I 'm not Aeneas, nor yet Paul am I; me worthy of this, nor I nor others deem. If, therefore, I consent to come, I fear lest foolish be my coming; thou art wise, and canst much better judge than I can talk."

And such as he who unwills what he willed, and changes so his purpose through new thoughts, that what he had begun he wholly leaves; such on that gloomy slope did I become; for, as I thought it over, I gave up the enterprise so hastily commenced. "If I have rightly understood thy words," replied the shade of that Great-hearted man, "thy soul is hurt by shameful cowardice, which many times so sorely hinders one, that from an honored enterprise it turns him, as seeing falsely doth a shying beast. In order that thou didst thee of this fear, I’ll tell thee why I came, and what I heard the first time I was greatly on my account. Among the intermediate souls I was, when me a Lady called, so beautiful and happy, that I begged her to command. Her eyes were shining brighter than a star, when sweetly and softly she began to say, as with an angel’s voice she spoke to me: ‘O courteous Mantuan spirit, thou whose fame is still enduring in the world above, and will endure as long as lasts the world, a friend of mine, but not a friend of Fortune, is on his journey o’er the lonely slope obstructed so, that he hath turned through fear; and, from what I have heard of him in Heaven, I fear lest he may now have strayed so far, that I have risen too late to give him help. Bestir thee, then, and with thy finished speech, and with whatever his escape may need, assist him so that I may be consoled. I, who now have thee go, am Beatrice; thence come I, whither I would fain return; ‘t was love that moved me, love that makes me speak. When in the presence of my Lord again, often shall I commend thee unto Him.’

Thereat she ceased to speak, and I began: ‘O Lady of virtue, thou through whom alone eternal things, and I eternal last; Before me there was naught created, save the highest Wisdom and the primal Love. I was created by the Might divine, Justice inspired my high exalted Maker; through me among the people that are lost. Through me one goes into eternal pain, through me one goes in to the town of woe, Dost thou not hear the anguish of his cry? see’st not the death that fights him on the flood, o’er which the sea availeth not to boast? Ne’er were there any in the world so swift to seek their profit and avoid their loss, as I, after such words as these were uttered, descended hereon from my blessed seat, confiding in that noble speech of thine, which honors thee and whosoe’er has heard it.’ Then, after she had spoken to me thus, weeping she turned her shining eyes away; which made me hasten all the more to come; and, even as she wished, I came to thee, and led thee from the presence of the beast, which robbed thee of the fair Mount’s short approach. What is it, then? Why, why dost thou hold back? Why dost thou lodge such baseness in thy heart, and wherefore free and daring art thou not, since three so blessed Ladies care for thee within the court of Heaven, and my words, too, give thee the promise of so much that’s good?’

As little flowers by the chill of night bowed down and closed, when brightened by the sun, stand all erect and open on their stems; so likewise with my wearied strength did I; and such good daring coursed into my heart, that I began as one who had been freed: “O piteous she who hastened to my help, and courteous thou, that didst at once obey the words of truth that she addressed to thee! Thou hast with such desire disposed my heart toward going on, by reason of thy words, that to my first intention I’ve returned. Go on now, since we two have but one will; thou Leader, and thou Lord, and Teacher thou!” I thus addressed him; then, when he had moved, I entered on the wild and arduous course. nd courteous thou, that didst at once obey the words of truth that she addressed to thee! Thou hast with such desire disposed my heart toward going on, by reason of thy words, that to my first intention I’ve returned. Go on now, since we two have but one will; thou Leader, and thou Lord, and Teacher thou!” I thus addressed him; then, when he had moved, I entered on the wild and arduous course.

3. The Gate and Vestibule of Hell

Cowards and Neutrals. Acheron

Through me one goes into the town of woe, through me one goes into eternal pain, through me among the people that are lost. Justice inspired my high exalted Maker; I was created by the Mighty divine, the highest Wisdom and the primal Love. Before me there was naught created, save eternal things, and I eternal last; all hope abandon, ye that enter here! These words of gloomy color I beheld inscribed upon the summit of a gate; whence I: “Their meaning, Teacher, troubles me.” And he to me, like one aware, replied: “All fearfulness must here be left behind; all forms of cowardice must here be dead. We’ve reached the place where, as I said to thee, thou’lt see the sad folk who have lost the Good which is the object of the intellect.”

Then, after he had placed his hand in mine with cheerful face, whence I was comforted, he led me in among the hidden things. There sighs and wails and piercing cries of woe reverberated through the starless air; hence I, at first, shed tears of sympathy. Strange languages, and frightful forms of speech, words caused by pain, accents of anger, voices both loud and faint, and smiting hands withal, a mighty tumult made, which sweeps around forever in that timelessly dark air, as sand is wont, whene’er a whirlwind blows. And I, whose head was girt about with horror, said: “Teacher, what is this I hear? What folk is this, that seems so overwhelmed with woe?” And he to me: “These have no hope of death, and so low down is this unseeing life of theirs, that envious they are of every other destiny. The world allows no fame of them to live; Mercy and Justice hold them in contempt. Let us not talk of them; but look, and pass!” And I, who gazed intently, saw a flag, which, whirling, moved so swiftly that to me contemptuous it appeared of all repose; and after it there came so long a line of people, that I never would have thought that death so great a number had undone. When some I’d recognized, I saw and knew the shade of him who through his cowardice the great Refusal made. I understood immediately, and was assured that this the band of cowards was, who both to God displeasing are, and to His enemies. These wretched souls, who never were alive, were naked, and were sorely spurred to action by means of wasps and hornets that were there. The latter streaked their faces with their blood, which, after it had mingled with their tears, was at their feet sucked up by loathsome worms. When I had given myself to peering further, people I saw upon a great stream’s bank; I therefore said: “Now, Teacher, grant to me that I may know who these are, and what law makes them appear so eager to cross over, as in this dim light I perceive they are.”

And he to me: “These things will be made clear to thee, as soon as on the dismal strand of Acheron we shall have stayed our steps.” Thereat, with shame-suffused and downcast eyes, and fearing lest my talking might annoy him, up to the river I abstained from speech. Behold then, coming toward us in a boat, an aged man, all white with ancient hair, who shouted: “Woe to you, ye souls depraved! Give up all hope of ever seeing Heaven! I come to take you to the other shore, into eternal darkness, heat and cold. And thou that yonder art, a living soul, withdraw thee from those fellows that are dead.”

But when he saw that I did not withdraw, he said: “By other roads and other ferries shalt thou attain a shore to pass across, not here; a lighter boat must carry thee.” To him my Leader: “Charon, be not vexed; thus is it yonder willed, where there is power to do whate’er is willed; so ask no more!” Thereat were quieted the woolly cheeks of that old boatman of the murky swamp, who round about his eyes had wheels of flame. Those spirits, though, who nude and weary were, their color changed, and gnashed their teeth together, as soon as they had heard the cruel words. They kept blaspheming God, and their own parents, the human species, and the place, and time, and seed of their conception and their birth. Then each and all of them drew on together, weeping aloud, to that accursèd shore which waits for every man that fears not God. Charon, the demon, with his ember eyes makes beckoning signs to them, collects them all, and with his oar beats whoso takes his ease. Even as in autumn leaves detach themselves, now one and now another, till their branch sees all its stripped off clothing on the ground; so, one by one, the evil seed of Adam cast themselves down that river-bank at signals, as doth a bird to its recalling lure. Thus o’er the dusky waves they wend their way; and ere they land upon the other side, another crowd collects again on this.

“My son,” the courteous Teacher said to me, “all those that perish in the wrath of God from every country come together here; and eager are to pass across the stream, because Justice Divine so spurs them on, that what was fear is turned into desire. A good soul never goes across from hence; if Charon, therefore, findeth fault with thee, well canst thou now know what his words imply.” The darkling plain, when this was ended, quaked so greatly, that the memory of my terror bathes me even now with sweat. The tear-stained ground gave forth a wind, whence flashed vermilion light which in me overcame all consciousness; and down I fell like one whom sleep o’ertakes.

4. The First Circle. The Borderland Unbaptized Worthies. Illustrious Pagans

A heavy thunder-clap broke the deep sleep within my head, so that I roused myself, as would a person who is waked by force; and standing up erect, my rested eyes I moved around, and with a steady gaze I looked about to know where I might be. Truth is I found myself upon the verge of pain’s abysmal valley, which collects the thunder-roll of everlasting woes. So dark it was, so deep and full of mist, that, howsoever I gazed into its depths, nothing at all did I discern therein. “Into this blind world let us now descend!” the Poet, who was death-like pale, began, “I will be first, and thou shalt second be.” And I, who of his color was aware, said: “How am I to come, if thou take fright, who ’rt wont to be my comfort when afraid?” “The anguish of the people here below,” he said to me, “brings out upon my face the sympathy which thou dost take for fear. Since our long journey drives us, let us go!” Thus he set forth, and thus he had me enter the first of circles girding the abyss. Therein, as far as one could judge by list’ning, there was no lamentation, saving sighs which caused a trembling in the eternal air; and this came from the grief devoid of torture felt by the throngs, which many were and great, of infants and of women and of men. To me then my good Teacher: “Dost not ask what spirits these are whom thou seest here? Now I would have thee know, ere thou go further, that these sinned not; and though they merits have, ’t is not enough, for they did not have baptism, the gateway of the creed believed by thee; and if before Christianity they lived, they did not with due worship honor God; and one of such as these am I myself. For such defects, and for no other guilt, we ’re lost, and only hurt to this extent, that, in desire, we live deprived of hope.” Great sorrow filled my heart on hearing this, because I knew of people of great worth, who in that Borderland suspended were. “Tell me, my Teacher, tell me, thou my Lord,” I then began, through wishing to be sure about the faith which conquers every error; “came any ever, by his own deserts, or by another’s, hence, who then was blest?” And he, who understood my covert speech, replied: “To this condition I was come but newly, when I saw a Mighty One come here, crowned with the sign of victory. From hence He drew the earliest parent’s shade, and that of his son, Abel, that of Noah, and Moses the law-giver and obedient; Abram the patriarch, and David king, Israel, with both his father and his sons, and Rachel, too, for whom he did so much, and many others; and He made them blest; and I would have thee know that, earlier than these, there were no human spirits saved.” Because he talked we ceased not moving on, but all the while were passing through the wood, the wood, I mean, of thickly crowded shades. Nor far this side of where I fell asleep had we yet gone, when I beheld a fire, which overcame a hemisphere of gloom. Somewhat away from it we were as yet, but not so far, but I could dimly see that honorable people held that place. “O thou that honorest both art and science, who are these people that such honor have, that it divides them from the others’ life?” And he to me: “The honorable fame, which speaks of them in thy live world above, in Heaven wins grace, which thus advances them.” And hereupon a voice was heard by me: “Do honor to the loftiest of poets! his shade, which had departed, now returns.” And when the voice had ceased and was at rest, his shade, which had departed, now returns.” And when the voice had ceased and was at rest, four mighty shades I saw approaching us; their looks were neither sorrowful nor glad. My kindly Teacher then began to say: “Look at the one who comes with sword in hand before the three, as if their lord he were. Homer he is, the sovreviion poet; Horace, the satirist, the one that cometh next; the third is Ovid, Lucan is the last. Since each of them in common shares with me the title which the voice of one proclaimed, they do me honor, and therein do well.” Thus gathered I beheld the fair assembly of those the masters of the loftiest song, which soareth like an eagle o’er the rest. And, when he noticed this, my Teacher smiled. And even greater honor still they did me, for one of their own company they made me, so that amid such wisdom I was sixth. This last we crossed as if dry land it were; through seven gates with these sages I went in, and to a meadow of fresh grass we came. There people were with slow and serious eyes, and, in their looks, of great authority; they spoke but seldom and with gentle voice. We therefore to one side of it drew back into an open place so luminous and high, that each and all could be perceived. There on the green enamel opposite were shown to me the spirits of the great, for seeing whom I glory in myself. I saw Electra with companions many, of whom I knew both Hector and Aeneas, and Caesar armed, with shining falcon eyes. I saw Camilla with Penthesilea upon the other side, and King Latinus, who with Lavinia, his own daughter, sat. I saw that Brutus who drove Tarquin out, Lucretia, Julia, Martia and Cornelia, and, all alone, I saw the Saladin. Then, having raised my brows a little higher, the Teacher I beheld of those that know, seated amid a philosophic group. They all look up to him, all honor him; there Socrates and Plato I beheld, who nearer than the rest are at his side; Democritus, who thinks the world chance-born, Diogenes, Anaxagoras and Thales, Empedocles, Heraclitus, and Zeno; of qualities I saw the good collector, Dioscorides I mean; Orpheus I saw, Tully and Livy, and moral Seneca; Euclid, the geometer, and Ptolemy, Hippocrates, Avicenna, Galen, Averrhoës, who made the famous comment. I cannot speak of all of them in full, because my long theme drives me on so fast, that oft my words fall short of what I did. The sixfold band now dwindles down to two; my wise Guide leads me by a different path out of the calm into the trembling air; and to a place I come, where naught gives light.

5. The Second Circle. Sexual Intemperance The Lascivious and Adulterers

Thus from the first of circles I went down into the second, which surrounds less space, and all the greater pain, which goads to wailing. There Minos stands in horrid guise, and snarls; inside the entrance he examines sins, judges, and, as he girds himself, commits. I mean that when an ill-born soul appears before him, it confesses itself wholly; and thereupon that Connoisseur of sins perceives what place in Hell belongs to it, and girds him with his tail as many times, as are the grades he wishes it sent down. Before him there are always many standing; they go to judgment, each one in his turn; they speak and hear, and then are downward hurled. “O thou that comest to the inn of woe,” said Minos, giving up, on seeing me, the execution of so great a charge, “see how thou enter, and in whom thou put thy trust; let not the gate-way’s width deceive thee!”
To him my Leader: “Why dost thou, too, cry? Hinder thou not his fate-ordained advance; thus is it yonder willed, where there is power to do whate’er is willed; so ask no more!” And now the woeful sounds of actual pain begin to break upon mine ears; I now am come to where much wailing smiteth me. I reached a region silent of all light, which bellows as the sea doth in a storm, if lashed and beaten by opposing winds. The infernal hurricane, which never stops, carries the spirits onward with its sweep, and, as it whirls and smites them, gives them pain. Whene’er they come before the shattered rock, there lamentations, moans and shrieks are heard; there, cursing, they blaspheme the Power Divine. I understood that to this kind of pain are doomed those carnal sinners, who subject their reason to their sensual appetite. And as their wings bear starlings on their way, when days are cold, in full and wide-spread flocks; so doth that blast the evil spirits bear; this way and that, and up and down it leads them; nor only doth no hope of rest, but none of lesser suffering, ever comfort them. And even as cranes move on and sing their lays, forming the while a long line in the air; thus saw I coming, uttering cries of pain, shades borne along upon the aforesaid storm; I therefore said: “Who, Teacher, are the people the gloomy air so cruelly chastises?”

"The first of those of whom thou wouldst have news,” the latter thereupon said unto me, “was empress over lands of many tongues. To sexual vice so wholly was she given, that lust she rendered lawful in her laws, thus to remove the blame she had incurred. Semiramis she is, of whom one reads that she gave suck to Ninus, and became his wife; she held the land the Soldan rules. The next is she who killed herself through love, and to Sichaeus’ ashes broke her faith; See Helen, for whose sake so long a time of guilt rolled by, and great Achilles see, who fought with love when at the end of life. Paris and Tristan see;” and then he showed me, and pointed out by name, a thousand shades and more, whom love had from our life cut off. When I had heard my Leader speak the names of ladies and their knights of olden times, pity o’ercame me, and I almost swooned. “Poet,” I then began, “I ’d gladly talk with those two yonder who together go, and seem to be so light upon the wind.” “Thou ’lt see thy chance when nearer us they are;” said he, “beseech them then by that same love which leadeth them along, and they will come.” Soon as the wind toward us had bent their course. I cried: “O toil-worn souls, come speak with us, so be it that One Else forbid it not!”

As doves, when called by their desire, come flying with raised and steady pinions through the air to their sweet nest, borne on by their own will; so from the band where Dido is they issued, advancing through the noisome air toward us, so strong with love the tone of my appeal. “O thou benign and gracious living creature, that goest through the gloomy purple air to visit us, who stained the world blood-red; if friendly were the universal King, for thy peace would we pray to Him, since pity thou showest for this wretched woe of ours. Of whatsoever it may please you hear and speak, we will both hear and speak with you, while yet, as now it is, the wind is hushed. The town where I was born sits on the shore, whither the Po descends to be at peace together with the streams that follow him. Love, which soon seizes on a well-born heart, seized him for that fair body’s sake, whereof I was deprived; and still the way offends me. Love, which absolves from loving none that ’s loved, seized me so strongly for his love of me, that, as thou see’st, it doth not leave me yet. Love to a death in common led us on; Cain’s ice awaiteth him who quenched our life.” These words were wafted down to us from them. When I had heard those sorely troubled souls, I bowed my head, and long I held it low, until the Poet said: “What thinkest thou?” When I made answer I began: “Alas!
how many tender thoughts and what desire induced these souls to take the woeful step!" I then turned back to them again and spoke,
and I began: “Thine agonies, Francesca, cause me to weep with grief and sympathy.
But tell me: at the time of tender sighs, whereby and how did Love concede to you that ye should know each other’s veiled desires?”
And she to me: “There is no greater pain than to remember happy days in days of misery; and this thy Leader knows.
But if to know the first root of our love
so yearning a desire possesses thee, I’ll do as one who weepeth while he speaks.
One day, for pastime merely, we were reading of Launcelot, and how love o’erpowered him;
alone we were, and free from all misgiving.
Oft did that reading cause our eyes to meet,
and often take the color from our faces;
and yet one passage only overcame us.
When we had read of how the longed-for smile was kissed by such a lover, this one here, who nevermore shall be divided from me,
trembling all over, kissed me on my mouth.
A Gallehault the book, and he who wrote it!
No further in it did we read that day.” While one was saying this, the other spirit
so sorely wept, that out of sympathy
I swooned away as though about to die, and fell as falls a body that is dead.

6. The Third Circle.
Intemperance in Food Gluttons

On my return to consciousness, which closed before the kindred couple’s piteous case, which utterly confounded me with grief,
new torments all around me I behold,
and new tormented ones, where’er I move, where’er I turn, and wheresoe’er I gaze.
In the third circle am I, that of rain eternal, cursèd, cold and burdensome;
its measure and quality are never new.
Coarse hail, and snow, and dirty-colored water through the dark air are ever pouring down;
and foully smells the ground receiving them.
A wild beast, Cerberus, uncouth and cruel,
is barking with three throats, as would a dog,
over the people that are there submerged.
Red eyes he hath, a dark and greasy beard,
a belly big, and talons on his hands;
he claws the spirits, flays and quarters them.
The rainfall causes them to howl like dogs;
with one side they make shelter for the other;
oft do the poor profaners turn about.
When Cerberus, the mighty worm, perceived us,
his mouths he opened, showing us his fangs;
neither had he any limb that he kept still.
My Leader then stretched out his opened palms,
and took some earth, and with his fists well filled,
he threw it down into the greedy throats.
And like a dog that, barking, yearns for food,
and, when he comes to bite it, is appeased, since only to devour it doth he strain and fight; even such became those filthy faces demon Cerberus, who, thundering, stuns
the spirits so, that they would fain be deaf.
Over the shades the heavy rain beats down
we then were passing, as our feet we set upon their unreal bodies which seem real.
They each and all were laying on the ground,
excepting one, which rose and sat upright.
“O thou that through this Hell art being led,”
it said to me, “recall me, if thou canst;
for thou, before I unmade was, wast ma.
And I to it: “The anguish thou art in perchance withdraws thee from my memory so, it doth not seem that thee I ever saw.
But tell me who thou art, that in so painful
a place art set, and to such punishment, that none, though greater, so repulsive is.”
And he to me: “Thy town, which is so full of envy that the bag o’erflows already,
owned me when I was in the peaceful life.
Ciacco, you townspeople used to call me then;
for my injurious fault of gluttony I’m broken, as thou seest, by the rain;
nor yet am I, sad soul, the only one,
for all these here are subject, for like fault, unto like pain.” They did not speak no more.
“Thy trouble, Ciacco,” I replied to him,
“so burdens me that it invites my tears;
but tell me, if thou canst, to what will come
the citizens of our divided town;
if any one therein is just; and tell me
the reason why such discord hath assailed her.”
And he to me then: “After struggling long they ’ll come to bloodshed, and the boorish party will drive the other out with much offence.
Then, afterward, the latter needs must fall within three suns, and the other party rise, by help of one who now is ‘on the fence.’
A long time will it hold its forehead up, keeping the other under grievous weights,
howe’er it weep therefor, and be ashamed.
Two men are just, but are not heeded there;
the three sparks that have set men’s hearts on fire,
are overweening pride, envy and greed.”
Herewith he closed his tear-inspiring speech.
And I to him: “I ’d have thee teach me still,
and grant the favor of some further talk.
Farinàta and Tegghiàio, who so worthy were,
Jàcopo Rusticùcci, Arrigo and Mosca, and the others who were set on doing good,
tell me where these are, and let me know of them;
for great desire constraineth me to learn if Heaven now sweeten, or Hell poison them.”
And he: “Among the blackest souls are these;
a different fault weighs toward the bottom each;
if thou descend so far, thou mayst behold them.
But when in the sweet world thou art again, recall me, prithee, unto others’ minds;
I tell no more,
and further answer thee.”
His fixed eyes thereupon he turned askance;
a while he looked at me, then bowed his head,
and fell therewith among the other blind.
Then said my Leader: “He ’ll not wake again on this side of the angel-trumpet’s sound.
What time the hostile Podestà shall come,
each soul will find again its dismal tomb,
each will take on again its flesh and shape,
and hear what through eternity resounds.”
We thus passed through with slowly moving steps
the filthy mixture of the shades and rain, talking a little of the future life;
because of which I said: “These torments, Teacher, after the Final Sentence will they grow,
or less become, or burn the same as now.”
And he to me: “Return thou to thy science, which holdeth that the more a thing is perfect
so much the more it feels of weal or woe.
Although this cursèd folk shall nevermore arrive at true perfection, it expects to be more perfect after, than before.”
As in a circle, round that road we went,
speaking at greater length than I repeat,
and came unto a place where one descends;
there found we Plutus, the great enemy.
“Why keepest thou?” and “Wherefore throw away?”
They circled thus around the gloomy ring on either hand unto the point opposed, still shouting each to each their vile refrain;
then each turned back, when through his own half-ring
he had attained the other butting place.
And I, whose heart was well nigh broken, said:
“Now, Teacher, show me who these people are,
and tell me whether all these tounressed ones upon our left ecclesiastics were.”
And he replied to me: “They each and all were in their first life so squint-eyed in mind,
that they with measure used no money there.
Clearly enough their voices bark it forth, where’er they reach the two points of the ring,
where difference in fault unmateeth them.
These churchmen were, who have no hairy covering upon their heads, and Popes and Cardinals, among whom avarice works its mastery.”
And I to him: “Among such men as these I surely, Teacher, ought to recognize a few, who by these sins polluted were.”
And he to me: “Thou shapest a vain thought;
the undiscerning life which made them foul,
now to all recognition makes them dark.
To these two shocks they ’ll come eternally;
these from the sepulchre will rise again close-fisted; these, shorn of their very hair.
Ill-giving and ill-keeping took from them
the lovely world, and set them at this fray;
to qualify it I ’ll not use fair words.
Now canst thou, son, behold the short
me to time, the vain goods of the world
and all that was there once, could not avail
to make one of these weary spirits rest.”

“Teacher,” said I to him, “now tell me further:
what is this Fortune thou dost touch upon,
and for whose sake the human race contends;
for, all the gold there is beneath the moon,
and for whose sake the human race contends;
and of another answering from so far,
because of two small flames we there saw placed,
our eyes had upward toward its summit turned,
we ever reached the lofty tower’s foot,
we say, continuing, that long before
that they with measure used no money there.
that ‘neath the water there are folk who sigh,
that ‘neath the water there are folk who sigh,
that every part on every other shines,
thus equally distributing the light;
thus equally distributing the light;
so made the heavens, and so gave guides to them,
so made the heavens, and so gave guides to them,
they reach the two points of the ring,
that ‘neath the water there are folk who sigh,
that ‘neath the water there are folk who sigh,
that ‘neath the water there are folk who sigh,
ill-giving and ill-keeping took from them
ill-giving and ill-keeping took from them
ill-giving and ill-keeping took from them
ill-giving and ill-keeping took from them
the lovely world, and set them at this fray;
to qualify it I ’ll not use fair words.
now canst thou, son, behold the short
me to time, the vain goods of the world
and all that was there once, could not avail
to make one of these weary spirits rest.”

“Teacher,” said I to him, “now tell me further:
what is this Fortune thou dost touch upon,
and for whose sake the human race contends;
for, all the gold there is beneath the moon,
and for whose sake the human race contends;
and of another answering from so far,
because of two small flames we there saw placed,
our eyes had upward toward its summit turned,
we ever reached the lofty tower’s foot,
we say, continuing, that long before
that they with measure used no money there.
that ‘neath the water there are folk who sigh,
that ‘neath the water there are folk who sigh,
that ‘neath the water there are folk who sigh,
ill-giving and ill-keeping took from them
ill-giving and ill-keeping took from them
ill-giving and ill-keeping took from them
ill-giving and ill-keeping took from them
the lovely world, and set them at this fray;
to qualify it I ’ll not use fair words.
now canst thou, son, behold the short
me to time, the vain goods of the world
and all that was there once, could not avail
to make one of these weary spirits rest.”
come toward us through the water thereupon, under the guidance of a single boatman, who shouted: "Thou art caught now, wicked soul!"
"O Phlegyas, Phlegyas," said my Master then, "this time thou criest out in vain! No longer shalt thou have us, than while we cross the swamp."
Like one who listens to a great deceit practiced upon him, and who then resents it, so Phlegyas in his stifled wrath became.
My Leader then went down into the boat, and had me enter after him; and only when I was in it did it laden seem.
Soon as my Leader and I were in the boat, the ancient prow goes on its way, and cuts more water than with others is its wont.

While we were speeding through the stagnant trench, one stood before me filled with mud, and said: "Now who art thou, that comest ere thy time?"
And I to him: "Even though I come, I stay not; but who art thou, that art become so foul?"
He answered: "As thou see'st, I 'm one who weeps."

Then I to him: "In sorrow and in grief maest thou, accursèd spirit, here remain, for thee I know, all filthy though thou be!"
Then toward the boat he stretched out both his hands; my wary Teacher, therefore, thrust him off, saying: "Away there with the other dogs!"
And with his arms he then embraced my neck, and kissed my face, and said: "Blessèd be she who pregnant was with thee, indignant soul!
He was a haughty person in the world; nor is there any goodness which adorns his memory; hence his shade is furious here. How many now up yonder think themselves great kings, who here shall be like pigs in mire, leaving behind them horrible contempt!"
And I said: "Teacher, I ‘d be greatly pleased to see him get a ducking in this broth, before we issue from the marshy lake."

And he to me: "Thou shalt be satisfied before the shore reveal itself to thee; ‘t is meet that thou enjoy a wish like that."
Soon after this I saw the muddy people making such havoc of him, that therefor I still give praise and render thanks to God. They all were shouting: "At Filippo Argenti!" the spirit of the wrathful Florentine turning, meanwhile, his teeth against himself.

We left him there; of him I therefore tell no more; but on mine ears there smote a wail, hence I, intent ahead, unbar mine eyes.
The kindly Teacher said: "Now, son, at last the town, whose name is Dis, is drawing near with all its host of burdened citizens."
And I said: "Teacher, clearly I behold its mosques already in that valley there, vermilion, as if issuing out of fire;"
And he to me: "The eternal fire within which keeps them burning, maketh them look red, as thou perceivest in this nether Hell."
for I 'll not leave thee in the nether world."
Thus goes his way, and there abandons me,
my tender Father, and I in doubt remain;
for Yes and No contend within my head.
I could not hear what he proposed to them;
but with them there he did not long remain,
for each in rivalry ran back within.
They closed the gates, those enemies of ours, right in my Master's face, who stayed outside,
and walking with slow steps returned to me.
His eyes were downcast, and his eyebrows shorn of all self-trust, and as he sighed he said:
"Who has forbidden me the homes of pain?"
"Though I get angry, be not thou dismayed," he said to me, "for I shall win the fight, whate'er defensive stir be made within.
This insolence of theirs is nothing new,
for at a gateway less concealed than this they used it once, which still is lockless found.
Death's scroll thou sawest over it; and now this side of it One such descends the slope, crossing the rings unguided, that through him
the city will be opened unto us."

9. The Gate of the City of Dis
The Sixth Circle. Heresy

The color cowardice brought out on me, who saw my Leader coming back, the sooner repressed in him his unaccustomed hue.
He stopped attentive like a man who listens;
because his eyesight could not lead him far through the dark air, and through the heavy fog.
"Yet we must win the battle," he began,
"unless . . . One such did offer us herself!
Oh, how I long for some one to arrive!"
I well perceived how, when he overlaid what he began to say by what came after,
that these were words that differed from the first.
But none the less his language gave me fear, because I lent to his unfinished phrase a meaning worse, perhaps, than he intended.
"Into this bottom of the dismal shell
do any of that first grade e'er descend, whose only penalty is hope cut off?"
I asked this question. He replied to me:
"It seldom comes to pass that one of us performs the journey whereupon I go.
'T is true that I was conjured once before down here by magi of that wild Erichtho, who used to call shades back into their bodies.
My flesh had hardly been made bare of me,
when me she forced to enter yonder wall,
and thence withdraw a soul from Judas' ring.
That is the lowest and the darkest place,
and from the heaven that turns all things most distant;
well do I know the road; so be at rest!
This marsh, from which the mighty stench exhales, girdles the woeful city round about,
which without wrath we cannot enter now."
the uproar of a dread-inspiring sound, because of which both shores were all aquake,
a noise like nothing other than a wind, impetuous through opposing heats, which smites
a forest, and without the least restraint shatters, lays low, and carries off its boughs;
dust-laden it goes proudly on its way,
and makes wild animals and shepherds flee.
He freed mine eyes, and said: "Direct thou now your keenest vision o'er that ancient scum, to where that reeking smoke is most intense."
As frogs before the hostile water-snake scatter in all directions through the water, till each is squatting huddled on the shore;
more than a thousand ruined souls I saw,
who thus from one were fleeing, who on foot,
but with dry feet, was passing over Styx.
That dense air he kept moving from his face by often passing his left hand before him, and only with that trouble weary seemed.
I well perceived he was a Messenger from Heaven, and to my Teacher turned; with signs
he warned me to keep still, and bow before him.
Ah, how disdainful did he seem to me!
He reached the gate, and with a little wand
he opened it, for hindrance had he none.
"O people thrust from Heaven and held in scorn," upon the horrid threshold he began,
"whence dwells in you this overweening pride?
Why is it that ye kick against the Will,
from which its end can never be cut off,
and which hath more than once increased your pain?
Of what avail to butt against the Fates?
Your Cerberus, if ye remember well, still sports for this a hairless chin and neck."
He then returned along the filthy road, nor did he say a word to us; but looked like one whom other cares constrain and gnaw, than that of him who in his presence is;
then we with full assurance toward the town,
after those holy words, addressed our steps.
We entered it without the least contention;
and I, who longed to look about and see the state of those whom such a fortress holds,
when I was in it, cast mine eyes around,
and see on every side an ample plain,
with anguish and with awful torture filled.
Even as at Arles, where marshy turns the Rhone, or as at Pola near Quarnaro's gulf,
which bounds Italia, and her border bathes,
the sepulchres make all the ground uneven;
so likewise did they here on every side,
save that their nature was more bitter here;
for flames were spread about within the tombs, whereby they glowed with such intensity,
that no art needeth greater heat for iron.
The lids of all of them were raised, and wails so woeful issued thence, that of a truth they seemed the wails of wretched, tortured men.
"Teacher, what sort of people are those there,"
said I, "who, buried in those arc-like tombs, make themselves heard by means of woeful sighs?"
"Arch-heretics are with their followers here"
said he, "of every sect, and far more laden than thou believest are the sepulchers.
Here like with like is buried, and more hot and less so are the monuments." Thereat, when he had turned him to the right, we passed between the woes and lofty bastioned walls.
concealed from thee, in order to speak little;
nor hast thou only now thereto disposed me."

"O Tuscan, thou that through the town of fire dost go alive with such respectful speech, in this place be thou pleased to stay thy steps.
Thy very language makes thee manifest
a native of that noble fatherland,

"And yet that Lady’s face who ruleth here

"to which I was, perhaps, too great a bane."

All of a sudden issued forth these words from one of those ark-tombs; hence I, in fear, a little closer to my Leader drew.
And he said: "Turn around; what doest thou?
See Farinata who has risen there;

"thou ‘lt see him wholly from his girdle up."

Already had I fixed mine eyes on his;
and he was standing up with chest and head erect, as if he had great scorn for Hell.
My Leader then with bold and ready hands pushed me between the sepulchers toward him, saying: "Now let thy words be frank and clear."

When I was ‘neath his tomb, he looked at me awhile, and then, as though disdainfully,

"he asked of me: “Who were thine ancestors?”

And I, who was desirous to obey, hid it not from him, but revealed it all;
whereat he slightly raised his brows, and said:

"So bitterly were they opposed to me,

"and to mine ancestors, and to my party,

"that I on two occasions scattered them."

"If they were driven out,” I answered him,

"from all directions they returned both times;
your people, though, have not well learned that art."
A shade then at the tomb’s uncovered mouth rose at his side as far up as his chin;
I think that he had risen upon his knees.
Round me he looked, as if he wished to see whether some other one were with me there;
but when his doubt had wholly spent itself, weeping he said: “If thou through this blind prison

"donst go alive with such respectful speech,
and if in answering I was mute just now,
cause him to know it was because my thoughts
were struggling with the problem you have solved.”

And now my Teacher was recalling me;
with greater haste I therefore begged the spirit that he would tell me who was with him there.

"He said: “With o’er a thousand here I lie;
the second Frederick and the Cardinal are here within; I speak not of the rest.”
He thereupon concealed himself; and I,
those words recalling which seemed hostile to me, back toward the ancient Poet turned my steps.
The latter moved; and then, as on we went,
he said to me: “Why art thou so perplexed?”

And in what he asked I satisfied.
Then let thy mind preserve,” that Sage enjoined,

"what thou hast heard against thyself; pay now attention here!” His finger then he raised.

"When in the sweet ray’s presence thou shalt be not lighted fifty times again, ere thou shalt know how heavy that art is.
And so mayst thou return to the sweet world,
pray tell me why so pitiless toward mine
that people is in every law of theirs?”

Whence I to him: “The havoc and great slaughter which caused the Arbia to be colored red, occasion such petitions in our church.”
When, sighing, he had tossed his head, he said:

"In this thing I was not alone, nor surely

"had I, without due cause, moved with the rest;
but I was yonder, where assent was given by every one to do away with Florence, the only one to openly defend her.”

“So may your seed eventually repose,” I begged of him, “unto me, I pray,
the knot which has perplexed my thinking here.
It seems, if well I hear, that ye behold beforehand that which time brings with itself, while in the present ye do otherwise.”

"We see,” he said, “like one whose sight is poor, things that are far from us; to that extent the Highest Leader shines upon us still.
When they approach, or are, our intellect is wholly vain, and we, if others bring no news, know nothing of your human state.
Hence thou canst understand that wholly dead will be our knowledge from that moment on,
when closed shall be the gateway of the future.”

Thereat, for I was grieved at my mistake,
I said: “You ‘ll therefore tell that fallen man his son is dwelling with the living still;
and if in answering I was mute just now,
cause him to know it was because my thoughts
were struggling with the problem you have solved.”

And now the nature of his torment and his words shall not be lighted fifty times again, er to which I was, perhaps, too great a bane.
And so mayst thou return to the sweet world,
pray tell me why so pitiless toward mine
that people is in every law of theirs?”

When in the sweet ray’s presence thou shalt be
of Her whose lovely eyes see everything, from her thou ‘lt know the journey of thy life.” Thereafter to the left he turned his feet;
we left the wall, and toward the middle went along a path which to a valley leads,
which even up there unpleasant made its stench.
11. The Sixth Circle. Heresy
The Distribution of the Damned in the Inferno

Upon the utmost verge of a high bank, formed in a circle by great broken rocks, we came upon a still more cruel pack; and there, by reason of the horrible excess of stench the deep abyss exhales, for shelter we withdrew behind the lid of a large tomb, whereon I saw a scroll which said: “Pope Anastasius I contain, whom out of the right way Photinus drew.”

“Our going down from here must be delayed, so that our sense may first get used a little to this foul blast; we shall not mind it then.” The Teacher thus; and I: “Find thou therefor some compensation, lest our time be lost.” And he to me: “See how I think of this.”

“My son, within these rocks,” he then began, “are three small circles which, from grade to grade, are similar to those thou leavest now. Full of accursèd spirits are they all; but since against three persons force is used, its shape divides it into three great rings.

Both against God, one’s neighbor, and one’s self may force be used; against themselves, I mean, and what is theirs, as clearly shown thou’lt hear. By force both death and painful wounds are given one’s neighbor, and thereby his property is ruined, burned, and by extortions robbed; the first ring, hence, torments in separate troops all homicides and those that smite with malice, spoilers of property and highway robbers. Upon oneself may one lay violent hands, and on one’s goods; hence in the second ring must needs repentant be without avail whoever of your world deprives himself, gambles away and dissipates his means, and weepeth there where he should joyful be. ’Gainst God may force be used, by wittingly denying that He is, by blasphemy, and by disprizing Nature and His Goodness; and therefore with its mark the lesser ring sealeth both Sodom and Cahors, and him who, speaking from his heart, despises God. And fraud, whereby all consciences are bitten, one may employ against a man who trusts him, and ’gainst a man who storeth up no trust. Thus this latter kind of fraud would seem to kill only the bond of love which Nature makes; hence in the second circle make their nest hypocrisy, and flatteries, and workers of magic, coining, theft and simony, panders and grafters, and such filth as these. In the other way forgotten is the love which Nature makes, and that which afterward is joined thereto, whence special trust is born; hence in the smallest ring must needs repentant be without avail who ever of your world deprives himself, gambles away and dissipates his means, and weepeth there where he should joyful be. ’Gainst God may force be used, by wittingly denying that He is, by blasphemy, and by disprizing Nature and His Goodness; and therefore with its mark the lesser ring sealeth both Sodom and Cahors, and him who, speaking from his heart, despises God. And fraud, whereby all consciences are bitten, one may employ against a man who trusts him, and ’gainst a man who storeth up no trust. Thus this latter kind of fraud would seem to kill only the bond of love which Nature makes; hence in the second circle make their nest hypocrisy, and flatteries, and workers of magic, coining, theft and simony, panders and grafters, and such filth as these. In the other way forgotten is the love which Nature makes, and that which afterward is joined thereto, whence special trust is born; hence in the smallest ring must needs repentant be without avail who ever of your world deprives himself, gambles away and dissipates his means, and weepeth there where he should joyful be. ’Gainst God may force be used, by wittingly denying that He is, by blasphemy, and by disprizing Nature and His Goodness; and therefore with its mark the lesser ring sealeth both Sodom and Cahors, and him who, speaking from his heart, despises God. And fraud, whereby all consciences are bitten, one may employ against a man who trusts him, and ’gainst a man who storeth up no trust. Thus this latter kind of fraud would seem to kill only the bond of love which Nature makes; hence in the second circle make their nest hypocrisy, and flatteries, and workers of magic, coining, theft and simony, panders and grafters, and such filth as these. In the other way forgotten is the love which Nature makes, and that which afterward is joined thereto, whence special trust is born; hence in the smallest ring must needs repentant be without avail who ever of your world deprives himself, gambles away and dissipates his means, and weepeth there where he should joyful be.
“O Sun that healest every troubled sight, thou so contentest me when answering questions, that doubt, no less than knowledge, pleases me. Return a little further back,” said I, “to where thou sayest usury offends Goodness Divine, and loose the tangled knot.”

“Philosophy” said he to me, “points out to him that understandeth it, and not in one part only, that Nature takes her course from the Intellect Divine, and from its Art; and if thou note thy Physics carefully, after not many pages shalt thou find that your art follows that, as best it can, as the disciple him who teaches; hence, your art is grandchild, as it were, to God. From these two things, if thou recall to mind the first of Genesis, must people needs obtain their livelihood, and progress make. And as the usurer takes another course, Nature both in herself and in her follower he scorneth, since in something else he trusts. But follow me now, for I please to go; because the Fishes o’er the horizon quiver, and wholly over Caurus lies the Wain, and one descends the bank much further on."

The place, where to descend the bank we came, was Alp-like, and, through what was also there, such that all eyes would be repelled by it. As is that downfall on the hither side of Trent, which sidewise smote the Adige, through earthquake or through failure of support; since from the mountain’s summit, whence it moved down to the plain, the rock is shattered so, that it would yield a path for one above; even such was the descent of that ravine; and on the border of the broken bank was stretched at length the Infamy of Crete, who in the seeming heifer was conceived; and when he saw us there he bit himself, like one whom inward anger overcomes. In his direction then my Sage cried out: “Dost thou, perhaps, think Athens’ duke is here, who gave thee death when in the world above? Begone, thou beast! for this man cometh not taught by thy sister, but is going by, in order to behold your punishments.”

As doth a bull, who from his leash breaks free the moment he receives the mortal blow, and cannot walk, but plunges here and there; so doing I beheld the Minotaur; and he, aware, cried out: “Run to the pass! ’t is well that, while he rages, thou descend.” Thereat we made our way adown that heap of fallen rocks, which often ’neath my feet were moved, because of their unwonted load.

went along in thought; and he: “Perchance thou thinkest of this landslide, which is guarded by that beast’s anger which I quenched just now. Now I would have thee know that, when down here to nether Hell I came, that other time, this mass of rock had not yet fallen down. But certainly, if I remember well, not long ere He arrived, who carried off from Dis the highest circle’s mighty prey, on every side the deep and foul abyss so trembled that I thought the universe had felt the love, whereby, as some believe, the world to Chaos hath been oft reduced; and at that moment this old mass of rock was thus, both here and elsewhere, overthrown. But turn thine eyes down yonder now; for lo, the stream of blood is drawing near to us, wherein boils who by violence harms others.”

O blind cupidity, O foolish wrath, that so dost in our short life goad us on, and after, in the eternal, steep us thus! I saw a wide moat curving in an arc, and such that it embraces all the plain, according as my Escort had informed me; and in a file, between it and the bank, Centaurs were running by, with arrows armed, as in the world it was their wont to hunt. On seeing us descend, they all stopped short, and three of them detached them from the troop, with bows and arrows they had chosen first. And one cried from afar: “Ye that descend the slope, to what pain are ye coming? Tell it from there, or else I draw my bow.”
My Teacher said: “Our answer will we give to Chiron yonder, when we reach his side; thus ever to thy harm was thy will rash.”
He touched me then, and said: “That one is Nessus, who died for lovely Dejanira’s sake, and who himself wrought vengeance for himself; the middle one, who gazes at his breast, is that great Chiron who brought up Achilles; the other, Pholus, who so wrathful was. They go by thousands round about the moat, shooting each soul that from the blood emerges further than its own sin allotted it.”
To those swift-footed beasts we then drew near; Chiron an arrow took, and with its notch backward upon his jaws he pushed his beard. When he had thus uncovered his great mouth, he said unto his mates: “Are ye aware that he who comes behind moves what he touches? Yet dead men’s feet are not thus wont to do.” And my good Leader, who now reached his breast, where the two natures are together joined, replied: “He lives indeed, and thus alone must I needs show to him the dark abyss; necessity is leading him, not pleasure.
One who withdrew from singing praise to God, gave me this new commission; he is not a highwayman, nor I a robber’s soul. But by the Power, through whom I move my steps along so wild a road, bestow on us one of thy troop, at whose side we may be, and who may show us where one fords, and carry this man upon his back, for he is not a spirit who can travel through the air.”
Upon his right breast Chiron turned, and said to Nessus: “Turn around, and guide them thus, and if another troop should meet you, cause it to stand aside.” Then we with this safe escort skirted the edge of that red, boiling stream, wherein the boiled were crying out aloud. I saw some people in it to their brows. “These tyrants are,” the mighty Centaur said, “who took to bloodshed and to plundering. Here tears are shed because of heartless wrongs; here Alexander is, and who for years grieved Sicily, fierce Dionysius.
The brow which hath so black a head of hair, is Azzolino; the other which is blond, Obizzo of Este, who in truth was quenched up in the world by his un-natural son.”
I turned then toward the Poet, but he said: “Be he now first to thee, and second I.” A little further on the Centaur stopped over some people who, it seemed, emerged out of that boiling river from their necks. On one side there a lonely shade he showed us, and said: “He yonder in God’s bosom pierced the heart, which still is honored on the Thames.” Then people I beheld who from the stream held out their heads, and even all their chest; and many did I recognize of these. Thus shallower and shallower became that blood, until it only cooked their feet; here was the place for us to ford the ditch. “Even as thou seest that the boiling stream grows shallow more and more on this side here,” the Centaur said, “I wish thee to believe that on this other side its bottom sinks increasingly, until it joins the place where it behooveth tyranny to groan. Justice Divine is over here tormenting that Attila who was a scourge on earth, Pyrrhus, and Sextus; and forever milks the tears, which with the boiling it unlocks, from Rinier da Corneto and Rinier Pazzo, who on the highroads waged so great a war.” He then turned back, and crossed the ford again.

Not yet had Nessus reached the other side, when we had set our steps within a wood, which was not marked by any path whatever. No green leaves there, but leaves of gloomy hue; no smooth and straight, but gnarled and twisted, twigs; nor was there any fruit, but poison-thorns. No thickets rough and dense as these are owned by those wild beasts, that hate the tilled estates that lie between the Cécina and Corneto. Herein those ugly Harpies make their nest, who drove the Trojans from the Strophades, with gloomy prophecies of future loss. Wide wings they have, and human necks and faces; their feet are clawed, and feathered their great bellies;
I never broke the faith I owed my lord,
and thinking to avoid disdain by death,
that my glad honors turned to wretched grief.
and those on fire inflamed Augustus so,
'gainst a common form of death and vice of courts,
her harlot eyes from Caesar's dwelling
The courtesan who never turned away
so faithful was I to my glorious charge, that most gently, locking and unlocking it,
of Frederick's heart, and he who turned them round
I am the man who once held both the keys
if I am tempted to a little talk.

The trunk: "What in my verses only he has seen,
O wounded soul," replied my Sage to him,
"Had he before been able to believe,
and from a sturdy thorn-tree plucked a twig, whereat its trunk cried out: "Why dost thou rend me?"
Then, after growing dark with blood, its cry began again: "Why dost thou break me off?
Hast thou no spirit of compassion in thee?
Men were we once, and now are stocks become;
thy hand ought surely to have had more pity, even if the souls of serpents we had been."
As from a fresh, green log, that at one end is being burned, and at the other drips and makes a hissing with the escaping air;
so from the broken twig together issued both words and blood; I therefore dropped the end, and stood dumbfounded, like a man who fears.

"Had he before been able to believe,
O wounded soul," replied my Sage to him,
"what in my verses only he has seen,
he had not set his hand on thee; whereas the things' incredibility has made me lead him to do what I myself regret.
But tell him who thou wast, that he, by way of compensation, may refresh thy fame up in the world, where he can still return."
The trunk: "With sweet words thou dost so entice me, that I can not keep still; be not annoyed,
if I am tempted to a little talk.
I am the man who once held both the keys
of Frederick’s heart, and he who turned them round
so gently, locking and unlocking it, that most men from his secrets I withheld;
so faithful was I to my glorious charge,
that for its sake I lost both sleep and strength.
The courtesan who never turned away
her harlot eyes from Caesar’s dwelling-place, a common form of death and vice of courts,
'gainst me inflamed the minds of every one;
and those on fire inflamed Augustus so,
that my glad honors turned to wretched grief.
My mind, to vent its feelings of disdain,
and thinking to avoid disdain by death,
made me unjust against myself, the just.
By this tree’s uncouth roots, I swear to you,
I never broke the faith I owed my lord,
ho so deserving was of reverence!
And to the world should one of you return, let him assist my memory, which still lies crushed beneath the blow which envy gave it!"
A while he waited, then the Poet said:
"Since he is still, lose not thy chance; but speak, and ask him other questions, if thou like." Whence I to him: "Ask thou again what' er theoristestatisfactory to me;
for I could not, such pity stirs my heart!" Hence he began again: "So may this man do freely for thee what thy words request, imprisoned spirit, may it please thee still to tell us how within these knotted trunks
a soul is bound; and tell us, if thou canst, if any from such limbs is ever freed."
The trunk blew hard, and afterward
that wind was changed into the following words:
"Briefly shall a reply be made to you.
Whenever a wild spirit leaves the body,
from which itself hath torn itself away,
Minos commits it to the seventh ravine.
Into the wood it falls, nor is a place
allotted to it; but where Fortune hurls it,
there, like a grain of spelt, it germinates.
It grows into a sapling and wild tree;
and hears the crashing of the beasts and boughs
as likewise he is, who perceives a boar
in the wood it fall
and pack of hounds approach his hunting
they utter wailings on the uncouth trees.
that wind was changed into the following words:
"Briefly shall a reply be made to you.
Whenever a wild spirit leaves the body,
from which itself hath torn itself away,
Minos commits it to the seventh ravine.
Into the wood it falls, nor is a place
allotted to it; but where Fortune hurls it,
there, like a grain of spelt, it germinates.
It grows into a sapling and wild tree;
and hears the crashing of the beasts and boughs
as likewise he is, who perceives a boar
in the wood it fall
and pack of hounds approach his hunting
they utter wailings on the uncouth trees.
and how am I to blame for thy bad life?”
When over him my Teacher stopped, he said:
“Who then wast thou, that through so many gashes art blowing forth with blood such painful speech?”
And he to us: “O spirits that have come in time to see the unbecoming havoc,
which from me thus hath torn away my leaves, collect them at the foot of my sad bush!
I to that town belonged, which for the Baptist changed its first patron; wherefore he, for this,
will always make her mournful with his art;
and were it not that on the Arno’s bridge
there lingers still some little glimpse of him, those townsmen who rebuilt her afterward over the ashes left by Attila, had caused that work to be performed in vain.
I made myself a gibbet of my house.”

14. The Seventh Circle. The Third Ring
Violence against God. Blasphemers

Since love for my own native place constrained me,
I gathered up the scattered twigs and leaves,
and gave them back to him who now was weak.
Thence to the bound we came, where from the third the second ring is severed, and wherein a frightful form of Justice may be seen.
To manifest aright what here was new,
I say that we had reached a barren plain,
which from its bed removeth every plant.
The woeful wood is as a garland round it,
as round the former is the dismal moat;
there on its very edge we stayed our steps.
Its soil was of a dense and arid sand, whose nature differed in no way from that,
which once was trodden by the feet of Cato.
Vengeance of God, how much by every one thou oughtest to be feared, who readeth here what to these eyes of mine was manifest!
Of naked souls I many flocks beheld, who all wept very sorely, while on each
a different law appeared to be imposed.
A few lay on the ground upon their backs;
and some were seated cuddled up together,
while others moved about continually.
Most numerous were those that moved around,
and least so those that under torment lay,
but all the freer had their tongues to wail.
Down on the whole great waste of sand there rained with gentle fall dilated flakes of fire, like flakes of snow that fall on windless Alps.
As were the flames which Alexander saw in India’s torrid regions, as they fell upon his hosts, unbroken to the ground;
— and this he met, by ordering his troops
to trample on the soil, because the flames, when single, were more easily put out — even such descended here the eternal heat, whereby the sand was set on fire, as tinder is kindled under steel, to double pain.

And ever without resting was the dance
of wretched hands, that kept, now here, now there, slapping away each latest burning flake.
“Thou, Teacher,” I began, “that conquerest all, except the stubborn devils who came out against us at the entrance of the gate, who is that great one who seems not to mind
the fire, but lies there scornful and awry, so that the rain seems not to ripen him?”
And that same one, who had observed that I concerning him was questioning my Leader, cried: “As I was alive, such am I dead!
If Jove should tire that smith of his, from whom,
in wrath, he took the pointed thunderbolt, wherewith I smitten was that final day;
or should he tire the others, each in turn,
in Mongibello’s smithy black with smoke,
—
and this he met, by ordering his troops
on Phlegra’s battle-field;
and should he shoot at me with all his might,
no glad revenge would he obtain thereby!” Thereat my Leader spoke with so much force, that I had never heard him use the like:
“In that thine arrogance, O Capaneus, is not extinguished, art thou all the more chastised; no torment, saving thine own rage, were for thy furious pride a fitting pain.” Then with a gentler mien he turned to me, and said: “One of the seven kings was he,
who Thebes besieged; he held, and seems to hold God in disdain, and little seems to prize Him;
but, as I told him, his own spitefulness is fit enough adornment for his breast.
Now follow me, and see that thou meanwhile set not thy feet upon the burning sand, but to the thicket keep them ever close.”
In silence we went on, and came to where,
out of the wood a little stream spirts forth, whose ruddy color makes me shudder still. As from the Bulicàmë springs a brook, which afterward the sinful women share, even so went that one down across the sand. Its bottom and both sides had turned to stone, as also had the embankments on each side; I hence perceived the crossing-place was there. “Of all the other things which I have shown thee since first we entered through the outer gate, whose threshold unto no one is denied, nothing has ever by thine eyes been seen as notable as is this present brook, which deadens o’er itself all little flames.”

These were my Leader’s words; I therefore begged that he would freely grant to me the food, desire of which he had so freely given. “Amid the sea there lies a wasted land,” he told me thereupon, “whose name is Crete, under whose king the world of old was pure. There is a mountain there, which, happy once with waters and green leaves, was Ida called; ’t is now abandoned like a thing outworn. Whilom as trusty cradle for her son Rhea selected it, and when he wept, to hide him better, caused a shouting there. Within that mountain stands a great Old Man, who holds his shoulders toward Damiata turned, and who, as at his mirror, looks at Rome. His head is formed of finest gold, his arms and breast are of the purest silver, then, as far as to his loins, he’s made of brass; all chosen iron is he down from there, save that baked clay his right foot is, and straighter he stands on that, than on the other foot. Each of these parts, except the golden one, is broken by a cleft, whence trickle tears, which, when collected, perforate that cave. From rock to rock they course into this vale; then Acheron with Styx and Phlegethon they form, and through this narrow duct descend as far as where one goes no further down; they form Cocytus there; and what that pool is like, thou ‘lt see; hence here it is not told. And I to him: “If thus this present stream from our world descended, why alone on this ring’s edge hath it appeared to us?” And he: “Thou knowest that the place is round, and though a long way thou hast gone already, e’er to the left descending toward the bottom, through the whole circle thou hast not yet gone; therefore, if aught that’s new appear to us, it should not bring amazement to thy face.” And I again: “But where are Phlegethon and Lethe, Teacher? For, of this one silent, thou say’st the other of this rain is made.” And he replied: “Thou certainly dost please me in all thy questions, but the red stream’s boiling ought surely to have answered one of them. Lethe thou ‘lt see, but there, outside this cave, whither souls go to wash themselves, when once their sin, repented of, has been removed.” And then he said: “It now is time for us to leave the wood; see that thou follow me; the banks, which are not burned, afford a path; and up above them every flame is quenched.”

15. The Seventh Circle. The Third Ring
Violence against Nature. Sodomites

One of the hard embankments bears us now, and overhead the brook’s mist shades them so, that from the fire it saves the stream and banks. Such bulwarks as, to keep the sea away, the Flemings make between Witsand and Bruges, through fearing lest the high-tide break upon them; and as the Paduans make along the Brenta, their villages and strongholds to defend, ere Chiarentana feel the summer heat; in such a way were those embankments made, although the master did not make them there so high or thick, who’er he may have been. So far we were already from the wood, that I could not have seen just where it was, even had I turned around to look behind, when we a band of spirits met, who came along the bank, each one of whom looked hard at us, as in the evening one is wont to look at people, when the moon is new; and toward us they were knitting close their brows, as an old tailor at his needle’s eye. When by that gathering I had thus been eyed, one of them, who had recognized me, seizing my garment’s hem, exclaimed: “How wonderful!” And I, when toward me he had stretched his arm, fastened upon his roasted face mine eyes, so that, though blistered, it did not prevent mine intellect from recognizing him; and downward having bent my face toward his, I answered him: “Are you here, Ser Brunetto?” And that one: “O my son, be not displeased should Brunetto Latini a little way turn back with thee, and let the troop go on.” “I beg you to with all my power;” said I, “and if you’d have me sit with you, I will, if it please that one; for with him I go.” “O son,” he said, “whoever of this herd stands still at all, lies prone a hundred years, nor shields himself when smitten by the fire. Therefore go on; I’ll follow at thy skirts, and then I’ll join again my company, which goes bewailing its eternal loss.” I dared not from the path descend, to go upon his level there; but held my head bowed down, like one who walks in reverence. And he began: “What fortune or what fate before thy last day leaddeth thee down here, and who is he that showeth thee the way?” I answered him: “When in the life serene up yonder, in a vale I lost my way, before my age had rounded out its noon. Thereon I turned my back but yestermorn; this one, as I returned to it, appeared to me, and o’er this path now leads me home.” And he to me: “If thine own star thou follow, thou canst not fail to reach a glorious port, if in the lovely life I judged aright; and had I not so prematurely died, I, seeing Heaven so well disposed toward thee, who is he that showeth thee the way?” And he to me: “Tis well to know of some; but that party shall be thy foe; and distant from the goat shall be the grass. An old fame in the world proclaims them blind, a greedy, envious, overweening folk; see to it that thou cleanse thee from their ways! Thy fortune hath in store for thee such honor, that either party shall be hungry for thee; nor speaking less do I, on this account, please that one; for with him I go.” “He listens well, who giveth heed to this,” Nor speaking less do I, on this account, go on with Ser Brunetto, asking who his fellows were, of greatest note and rank. And he to me: “T is well to know of some; our silence on the rest will merit praise, for short the time were for so long a talk. Know then, in brief, that clerics were they all, and mighty men of letters of great fame, soiled by the self same sin when in the world. And with that sad crowd yonder Priscian goes, and Francis of Accorso, too; and him, if thou hadst had a longing for such scurf, thou couldst have seen there, whom the servants’ Servant changed from the Arno to the Bacchigliônë, where he behind him left his ill-strained nerves. I’d speak of more; but I can come and talk no further, for a new dust-cloud I see rising o’er yonder from the sandy plain. People, with whom I must not be, are coming; let my Tesoro, in which I’m still alive, be recommended thee; I ask no more.” Then round he turned, and seemed to be of those who at Verona run across the meadow to win the green cloth; and of these he seemed not he who loses, but the one who wins.

I now was where the booming of the water, which fell into the following round, was heard like the dull, buzzing sound which bee-hives make; when three shades separated from a group, which ‘neath the rain’s tormenting punishment was passing by, and ran along together. Toward us they came, and each of them cried out: “Stop, thou, that by thy garb dost seem to us a citizen of our corrupted town!” Nor speaking less do I, on this account, please that one; for with him I go. “He listens well, who giveth heed to this.” Alas, what wounds I saw upon their limbs, both old and recent, by the flames burnt in! It pains me still but to remember them. My Leader, giving heed to these their cries, turned his face round toward me, and said: “Now wait! To those men yonder courtesy is due; and, were not for the fire, which, arrow-like, the nature of the place shoots forth, I’d say that haste were more becoming thee than them.” And they, when we had stopped, began again their old refrain; and after they had reached us, all three of them made of themselves a wheel. As champions oiled and nude are wont to do, when looking for an advantageous grip, before they come to giving blows and wounds; thus, as he wheeled, each turned his face toward me, so that his feet continuous journey made in opposite direction to his neck.

And one began: “Even if the wretched nature of this soft place, and our burned, shrivelled faces bring us and our requests into contempt, still let our reputation bend thy mind to tell us who thou art, that dost so safely rub on the soil of Hell thy living feet. He, in whose footprints thou dost see me tread, was, though he go both nude and hairless now, of higher rank then thou believest him. He was the grandson of the good Gualdrada; his name was Guido Guerra, and when alive, his wisdom and his sword accomplished much.

The other, who behind me treads the sand, Tegghiàio Aldobrandi is, whose voice should have been welcomed in the world above. And I, who with them am tormented here, Iàcopo Rusticucci was; and surely my shrewish wife than aught else hurts me more.” If I had been protected from the fire, I would have lept into their midst below, and I believe my Leader had allowed it. But since I should have burned and baked myself, fear was victorious over my good will, which made me eager to embrace them there. I then began: “Your state impressed within me not scorn, but so much pain, that only late will all of it entirely disappear, as soon as this my Lord said words to me, because of which I thought within myself that there were people coming such as you. Of your own town am I, and evermore have I your doings and your honored names related, and heard mentioned, with regard. I leave the gall, and for the sweet fruit go, which my veracious Leader promised me; but to the center must I first descend.” “So may thy spirit lead thy members long,” the former thereupon replied to me, “and, after thou art gone, thy fame be bright, tell me if courtesy and worth abide within our town, as they were wont to do, or whether they have wholly gone from it; for Guglielmo Borsierë, who but newly has been in pain with us, and with our mates goes yonder, grieves us greatly with his words.” “The people newly come, and sudden gains, have bred in thee such pride and such excess, that, Florence, thou art even now in pain!” Thus with uplifted face I cried; whereat the three, who this as answer understood, looked at each other, as one looks at truth. “If satisfying others other times cost thee so little, happy thou, that thus at thy sweet will dost speak!” they all replied. “Hence,— so mayst thou, from these dark places saved, return to see the lovely stars again,— when saying ‘I was there’ shall do thee good, see that thou tell the people about us.” They then broke up their wheel, and in their flight it seemed as if their nimble legs were wings. Amen could not have been as quickly said, as they then disappeared; my Teacher, therefore, thought it advisable for us to leave.

I followed him, and not far had we gone, before the water’s noise was so near by, that, had we spoken, we had not been heard. And as the stream, which is the first that eastward from Monte Veso takes a separate course upon the left slope of the Apennines, and which above is Acquacheta called, before it flows into its lowly bed, and at Forlì is of that name deprived, booms loud, because of falling o’er a cliff above San Benedetto of the Alp, where for a thousand there should refuge be; even thus, as o’er a precipice it fell, we found that colored water roaring so, that very soon it would have hurt our ears. I had a cord around about me girt, wherewith I once had thought that I could capture the Leopard with the brightly colored hide. When from me I had wholly loosened it, even as my Leader had commanded me, I coiled it up and held it out to him. Thereat upon his right he turned around, and hurled it to some distance from the edge down into that profound and dark abyss. “Surely some strange new thing must needs reply” said I within myself, “to this strange signal, which with his eye my Teacher follows thus.”
Ah, with what caution men should deal with those,
who see not only what is done by others,
but with their wisdom see into their thoughts!
He said to me: “What I am waiting for,
and what thy thought now dreams, will soon come up;
soon to thy vision will it be revealed.”
E’er to a truth that hath a falsehood’s face ought one to close his lips as best he can,
for, though one faultless be, it brings him shame;
but I can not suppress it here; hence, Reader, even by the verses of this Comedy,
so may they not be void of lasting favor,
I swear to thee, that through that coarse, dark air
I saw a shape, which would have chilled with wonder however brave a heart, come swimming up, as he returns, who, going down at times to clear an anchor clinging to a reef, or aught else lying hidden in the sea,
above extends, and draweth in below.

17. The Seventh Circle. The Third Ring
Violence against Art. Usurers

“Behold the wild beast with the pointed tail, which, crossing mountains, breaks through walls and armor;
behold who sickens all the world with stench!”
My Leader thus began to speak to me,
and signalled to it to approach the edge,
near where the marble we had traversed ended.
And that foul image of deceit came on,
and landed on the bank its head and chest;
but o’er the edge it drew not up its tail.
Its face was as the face of a just man,
so pleasing outwardly was its complexion;
the body of a serpent all the rest.
Two paws it had, all hairy to the arm-pits;
its back and breast, as well as both its sides,
were painted o’er with snares and wheel-like shields.
Ne’er with more colors in its woof and warp did Turks or Tartars manufacture cloth, nor by Arachnne were such webs designed.
As flat-boats sometimes lie upon the shore,
in water partly, partly on the land;
and as among the greedy Germans yonder,
the beaver seats himself to wage his war;
so lay that worst of beasts upon the edge which closes in the sandy plain with stone.
All of its tail was quivering in the void,
and twisting upward its envenomed fork,
which like a scorpion’s weapon armed its tip.
“Our path must turn aside a little now,” my Leader said to me, “until we reach that wicked beast reclining over there.”
Around our right breast, therefore, we went down,
and took ten paces on the very edge,
thus surely to avoid both sand and fire;
and after we had come to it, I saw,
upon the sand a little further on,
some people sitting near the precipice.
My Teacher then: “That thou mayst take with thee
a full experience of this ring, go on,
and see the nature of the life they lead.
There be thy conversation brief; meanwhile,
till thou return, I’ll talk with this wild beast, that its strong shoulders may be yielded us.” Thus further on, along the outer edge of that seventh circle, all alone I went,
to where the melancholy people sat.
Out of their eyes their woe was bursting forth;
first here, then there, they helped them with their hands,
now from the flames, now from the heated soil.
Not otherwise do dogs in summer-time,
now with their paws, and with their muzzles now, whene’er by flees, or flies, or gadflies bitten.
When on the face of some I set mine eyes,
on whom the woeful fire is falling there,
I knew not one of them; but I perceived that from the neck of each there hung a pouch, which had a certain color and design, wherewith their eyes appeared to feed themselves.
And as I, looking, came into their midst,
a blue pouch I saw,
which had the form and semblance of a lion.
Then, as my gaze continued on its course,
another I beheld, as red as blood, exhibiting a goose more white than butter.
And one of them, who had his small white pouch emblazoned with an azure pregnant sow, said to me: “What dost thou in this our ditch?
Now go thy way; and since thou livest still,
know that my fellow townsman, Vitaliano, will sit beside me here upon my left.
I, with these Florentines, a Paduan am,
and very frequently they stun my ears
by shouting: “Let the sovereign knight arrive, who ’ll bring with him the pocket with three beaks!”"
Herewith his mouth he twisted, sticking out his tongue, as doth an ox that licks its nose. And I, afraid lest any longer stay might anger him who warned me to be brief, turned from those weary spirits back again. I found my Leader, who had climbed already upon the back of that fierce animal, and said to me: “Now be thou strong and bold! By stairs like these shall we descend hereafter; climb thou in front, for midst I wish to be, so that the tail may do no injury.” Like one with quartan-fever’s chill so near, that pale already are his finger nails, and that, but looking at the shade, he shudders; such at the words he uttered I became; but that shame made its threats to me, which renders a servant strong when in a good lord’s presence. As on those horrid shoulders I sat down, I wished to tell him: “See that thou embrace me!” my voice, however, came not as I thought. But he, who succoured me at other times and other straights, as soon as I was up, encircled and sustained me with his arms; and then he said: “Now, Geryon, move thou on! Wide be thy wheels, and gradual thy descent; bethink thee of the unwonted load thou hast.” As from its mooring place a little boat backs slowly out, even so did he withdraw; and when he wholly felt himself in play, to where his breast had been, he turned his tail, and moved the latter, stretched out like an eel, while with his paws he gathered in the air.

I do not think that there was greater fear when Phaëthon let go his horses’ reins, whereby, as still appears, the sky was burned; nor yet when wretched Icarus perceived his back unfeathering through the melting wax, while, calling him, his father cried: “Thou hold’st an evil course!” than mine was, when I saw that I was in the air on every side, and gone the sight of all things save the beast. The latter, swimming, slowly wends his way, wheels and descends, but I perceive it not, save by the wind below and in my face. The waterfall I now heard on the right, making a horrid roar beneath us; hence, I outward thrust my head with eyes turned down. More fearful of the abyss I then became, for fires I now beheld, and wailings heard; hence, trembling, I clung closer with my thighs. And then, for I perceived it not before, by the great torments which on divers sides drew near, I saw our wheeling and descent. Even as a falcon long upon the wing, which, without seeing lure or game-bird, makes the falconer say: “Alas, thou comest down!” descendeth weary, through a hundred rings, whence he had swiftly started, and alights far from his lord in angry sullenness; so likewise Geryon set us down below, close to the bottom of the rough-hewn rock; and, of our persons rid, as fast as flies an arrow from a bowstring, sped away.

A place there is in Hell, called Malebolgë, wholly of stone, and of an iron hue, as is the round wall which encircles it. Right in the midst of its malicious field yawneth a well exceeding wide and deep, of whose construction, in its place, I’ll speak. Round, therefore, is the girdle which remains between the well and that hard, high wall’s base, and ten great trenches subdivide its bed. As is the appearance which, where many moats encircle castles for the walls’ protection, the section where they are presents; such was the one those trenches furnished here; and just as in such fortresses small bridges stretch from their thresholds to the outmost bank; so crags ran from the bottom of the cliff across the banks and trenches to the well, which, gathering them together, cuts them off. In this place, then, we found ourselves, when dropped from Geryon’s back; the Poet thereupon held to the left, and I behind him moved. Upon the right side I beheld new cause for sympathy, new pains, and scourgers new, witherewith the first trench was completely filled. Down at its bottom naked were the sinners; this side the middle facing us they came, beyond it with us, but with quicker steps; means such as those which at the Jubilee the Romans took, because of its great throng, to have the people pass across the bridge, who toward the Castle all on one side face, and toward Saint Peter’s go their way; while all move toward the mountain on the other edge.

This side and that, upon the dark, stone floor, horned demons with great scourges I beheld, who from behind were fiercely whipping them. Ah, how they caused them to lift them up their heels, when by the first blows smitten! Certainly none waited for the second, or the third. While I was going on, mine eyes were met by one of them; and instantly I said: “I fast not from a previous sight of him.” To make him out I therefore stayed my feet; and, having stopped with me, my gentle Leader assented to my going back a little.

That scourged one thought that he could hide himself by looking down, but little it availed him; for “Thou, that castest down thine eyes,” said I, unless the features which thou hast are false, Venèdico Caccianimo art; but what brings thee into such pungent sauces?” And he to me: “Unwillingly I tell it; but forced I am by thy transparent speech, that not so many tongues are taught today between Savena and Reno to say sips; and if thereof thou wouldst have pledge or proof, recall to mind our avaricious breasts.” As thus he spoke, a demon with his lash smote him, and said to him: “Pandar, begone! There are no women here to sell for coin.” I then rejoined my Escort; whereupon, when we had taken some few steps, we came to where a crag projected from the bank. This we ascended with the greatest ease, and turning to the right along its ridge, we left those everlasting circling walls.

When we were where it hollows out below, to let the scourged pass through, my Leader said: “Now stay thy steps, and on thee let the sight of all these other ill-born spirits strike, whose faces thou hast not perceived as yet, because they ‘ve gone with us in our direction.” As from the ancient bridge we watched the troop, which on the other side was toward us coming, and which the scourge was likewise driving on, without my asking, my good Teacher said: “Look at that great man there, who, as he comes, for all his pain, seems not to shed a tear. How royal an appearance he still keeps! Jason is he, who, by his doughtiness and wit, deprived the Colchians of their ram. He passed the isle of Lemmos on his way, after its pitiless and daring women had given up to death their every male.

With tokens of his love and flattering words he there deceived the maid, Hypsipyle, who previously had all the rest deceived. He left her there with child, and all alone; him to this punishment that fault condemns; and for Medea, too, is vengeance wrought. With him go those that in this way deceive; be this enough to know of this first ditch, and of those, too, that in its fangs it holds.”

Already we were where the narrow path forms with the second bank a cross, and makes therewith abutments for another arch.

We thence heard people in the following trench who whined and groaned, and with their muzzles puffed, while smiting their own bodies with their palms. The banks were crusted over with a mould by vapor from below, which, sticking there, offensive to both eyes and nose became.

So deep the bottom, that there is no means of looking into it, unless one climb the arch’s summit, where the crag is highest. Thither we came, and from it in the ditch people I saw immersed in excrement, which seemed from human privies to have come. While peering with mine eyes down there, I saw a head so foul with filth, that whether clerk’s or layman’s head it were, was not apparent.

Scolding, he said: “Why greedier art thou to look at me, than at the other foul ones?” And I: “Because, if I remember well, I ‘ve seen thee with dry hair ere now, for thou Alèssio Interminèi of Lucca art; that ‘s why I eye thee more than all the rest.” And he then, as he beat upon his pate: “Those flatteries immersed me here below, wherewith my tongue was never surfeited.” Then, after this, my Leader said to me: “See that thou urge thy glance a little further, that with thine eyes thou quite attain the face of that disgusting and dishevelled wench, who yonder claws herself with filthy nails, and crouches now, and now is on her feet. That Thaïs is, the prostitute, who answered her paramour, when he had said ‘Have I great thanks from thee?’: ‘Nay, marvelously great!’ Herewith, then, let our sight be satisfied.”

19. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Third Trench. Simoniacs

O Simon Magus, O his wretched followers, since ye the things of God, which ought to be the brides of righteousness, rapaciously adulterate for silver and for gold; it now behooves the trumpet sound for you, for in the third great trench your station is! We now had climbed the next tomb-spanning bridge, and were on that part of the crag, which hangs directly o’er the middle of the trench.
Wisdom Supreme, how great the art thou showest in Heaven, on earth, and in the evil world!
How justly, too, thy virtue makes awards!
I saw that on its sloping sides and bottom the livid-colored stone was full of holes, all of one width, while each of them was round. Nor less nor more wide did they seem to me, than those which in my beautiful Saint John’s are made as places for baptizing priests; and one of which, not many years ago, I broke, to save one who was choking in it; be this a witness undeceiving all!
Out of the mouth of each a sinner’s feet protruded, and, as far as to the calf, his legs; the rest of him remained within. The soles of all were, both of them, on fire; because of which their joints so strongly twitched, they would have snapped green twigs and cords of grass.
And as a flame on oily things is wont to move along the outer surface only; so likewise was it there from heels to toes.
"Who, Teacher, is he yonder, who is tortured more than all the rest, his mates," said I, “and whom a redder flame is sucking?"
And he to me: “If thou wouldst have me bear thee down yonder bank which lowest lies, from him thou ‘lt know both of himself and of his sins.” And I: “What pleases thee I like; my lord thou art, and that I part not from thy will thou knowst, as also what is left unsaid.”
We then upon the fourth embankment came, and, turning round, descended on our left into that narrow bottom pierced with holes; nor yet did my good Teacher set me down from off his back, but brought me to the hole of him who grieved so sorely with his shank.
“Whoe’er thou art, sad soul, that holdest down thine upper portion, planted like a stake,” I then began, “say something, if thou canst.”
I there was like a friar that confesses a base assassin, who, on being planted, calls him again, that death may be delayed. And he cried out: “Dost thou stand there already, dost thou stand there already, Boniface? By several years the writing lied to me. Art thou so quickly sated with the wealth, for which thou didst not fear to seize by fraud, and outrage next, the Lady beautiful?”
Even such did I become, as those are, who, not understanding what is answered them, deem themselves mocked, and think of no reply. Then Virgil said: “Tell him immediately: ‘I’m not the one, I’m not the one thou thinkest!’” And I replied to him as I was bidden. Whereat the spirit writhed with both his feet; then, sighing, and with weeping voice, he said: "What is it, then, that thou dost ask of me? If to know who I am concern thee so, that for it thou hast crossed the bank; know, then, that I was with the mighty Mantle clothed; and verily the she-Bear’s son was I, so eager to advance the cubs, that wealth I pocketed up there, and here myself. The others, who in working simony preceded me, are gathered ‘neath my head, flattened between the fissures of the rock.
I, in like manner, shall down yonder fall, when he arrives, whom I believed thou wast, when I of thee the sudden question asked. But now already longer is the time, that I, thus up-side down, have cooked my feet, than he will planted stay with ruddy soles; for after him shall come from westward lands a lawless shepherd of still uglier deed, and fit to cover him and me. Renewed shall Jason be, of whom in Maccabees one reads; and as to that one his king yielded, even so who governs France shall yield to this.” I know not whether I was here too bold, in that I answered him in this strain only: "Now tell me, pray, how great the treasure was, our Lord demanded of Saint Peter first, before He placed the Keys in his control? Surely he asked for naught but ‘Follow me.’ Nor yet did Peter or the rest take gold or silver from Matthias, when by lot he took the place the guilty soul had lost. Therefore keep still, for thou art rightly punished; and take good care of that ill-gotten wealth, which caused thee to be valiant against Charles. And were it not for this, that I am still forbidden by reverence for the Keys supreme thou hadst in keeping in the joyful life, words of still greater weight would I employ; because your greed, by trampling on the good and raising the depraved, afflicts the world. The Evangelist was thinking of your shepherds, when she, who on the waters hath her seat,
was seen by him to fornicate with kings;
the one who with the seven heads was born,
and from the ten horns her support received,
while virtue still was pleasing to her spouse.

Ye' ve made yourselves a god of gold and silver;
and from idolaters how differ ye,
save that they worship one, and ye a hundred?
Ah, Constantine, of how much ill was mother, not thy conversion, but the dower-gift
the earliest wealthy Father took from thee!"

While I was singing him such notes as these,
he, whether it were wrath or conscience bit him,
was fiercely kicking out with both his feet.

I verily believe it pleased my Leader, he heeded with so glad a look throughout the utterance of those true, clear words of mine.

He therefore took me up with both his arms,
and when he had me wholly on his breast,
he climbed again the path down which he came;
nor tired of holding me in his embrace,
but bore me to the summit of th

20. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Fourth Trench. Diviners and Soothsayers

About strange punishments must I make verses, and furnish matter for the twentieth song
of this first lay, which treats of those submerged.

Already had I wholly given myself to looking down at its uncovered bottom, which with the tears of agony was bathed;
when people in the great round trench I saw come weeping silently, and at the pace, at which in this world litanies advance.

Then, as my sight fell on them lower down, wondrously twisted each of them appeared between the chin and where the chest begins;
for toward his loins his face was turned around,
and backward it behooved him to advance,
because of foresight they had been deprived.

By palsy some, perhaps, may thus have been entirely turned around, but I ’ve not seen it, nor do I think there ever was one such.

So may God let thee, Reader, gather fruit from this thy reading, think now for thyself
how I could ever keep my own face dry, when at close range I saw our human image so twisted, that the weeping of the eyes along the fissure bathed the back. Indeed, as on a rock of that hard crag I leaned,
I wept so, that my Escort said to me:
“Art thou still foolish as the others are?
Here liveth piety when wholly dead is pity. Who, then, guiltier is than he who lets his feelings judge Divine Decrees?

Lift, lift thy head, and see the man for whom,
before the Trojans’ eyes, the earth was opened!
whence all cried: ‘Whither art thou rushing now, Amphiaräus? Why quittest thou the war?’
and he ceased not from plunging headlong down to Minos, who lays hold on every one.

See how he makes a bosom of his shoulders;
because he wished to see too far ahead,
he looks behind, and backward goes his way.
Behold Tiresias there, who changed his looks,
when female he became, from being male,
his members being each and all transformed;
and afterward he needs must strike again
the two entwining serpents with his rod, er e he the plumage of a male regained.

He who to that one’s belly turns his back,
is Aruns, who in Luni’s mountain quarries,
where toils the Carrarese who dwells below, among white marbles had as dwelling-place
a cave, from which his view was not cut off, when at the stars he gazed, or at the sea.

And she who, yonder, with dishevelled locks covers the breasts which thou dost not behold, and has on that side all her hairy skin,
was Manto, who first searched through many lands,
then settled in the place where I was born;
thereof I ’d have thee hear me speak a little.

After her father had from life departed,
and Bacchus’ city had become enslaved, she wandered long about the world. Up there in lovely Italy, beneath the Alps which o’er the Tyrol lock out Germany, there lies a lake which is Benàco called.

From o’er a thousand springs, I trow, ’tween Garda and Val Camònica, the Pennine Alp is bathed by waters which therein find rest.
A midway place there is, where Trento’s shepherd, and he of Brescia, and the Veronese, might each his blessing give, if there he went.
Peschiera next, a fair and mighty fortress,
and fit to face both Bergamasks and Brescians, sits where the shore lies lowest round about.
There all that in Benàco’s spacious lap cannot be held, flows out of it perforce, and down through verdant pastures forms a stream.
When once its water gathers head to run,
no more Benàco, Mincio is its name, till at Govèrnolo it joins the Po.
Not long its course, before it finds low ground, ‘o’er which it spreads, and, making it a marsh,
is wont at times to be unsound in summer.
Passing that way, the cruel virgin saw a region in the middle of the fen, untilled and naked of inhabitants.
There, to escape all human fellowship,
and work her arts, she settled with her slaves,
and lived, and there she left her empty body.
Thereafter men, who all around were scattered, collected in that place, which was a strong one,
because it had a fen on every side.
O’er those dead bones of hers they built a town;
then, after her, who first picked out the site,
they called it Mantua, with no other lot.
The people in it were more numerous once, before the foolishness of Casalodi had been deceived by Pinamonte’s guile.
I charge thee, then, if e’er thou hear it said
my town had its beginning otherwise, permit no falsehood to defraud the truth.” “Thy statements, Teacher, are so sure to me,” said I, “and tak[e] such hold upon my faith, that those of others would be burnt—out coals.
But tell me if among these passing people thou seest any one deserving note;
for my mind now is wholly bent on that.”
He told me then: “The one who from his cheeks extends his beard across his swarthy shoulders, an augur was, when Greece lacked males so much,
that for her cradles only few were left;
’t was he who set, with Chalcas’ aid, at Aulis
the time to cut the fleet’s first rope. His name Eurîpylus, and in a certain place
he thus is called by my high Tragedy;
this thou know’st well, who knowest all of it.
That other one, so thin about his flanks, was Michael Scot, who surely understood the artful game of magical deceits.
Guido Bonatti see; and see Asdente, who wishes now that he had given heed
to cord and leather, but too late repents.
See the sad women who abandoned needles, spindles and shuttles, to become diviners;
these wrought their spells with herbs and images.
But now come on, for Cain is with his thorns holding the bounds of both the hemispheres, and plays upon the waves below Seville,
and round already was the moon last night;
thou surely must recall it, since at times,
it harmed thee not, when in the dark wood’s depths.”
Thus he to me, as, meanwhile, on we went.

21. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Fifth Trench. Corrupt Politicians

Speaking of other things my Comedy cares not to sing, we thus from bridge to bridge moved on, and, when upon the summit, stopped, in order to behold the next ravine of Malebölge, and the next vain cries;
and I beheld it wonderfully dark.
And just such sticky pitch as that which boils
in the Venetians’ Arsenal in winter, for calking up again the unsound ships, which cannot then be sailed; — instead of which,
as one a new one builds, one plugs the ribs
of that which many voyages has made;
one hammers at the stern, and at the prow another;
one fashions oars, another cordage twists, while still another mends a jib or mainsail; —
such was the coarse, dense pitch, which, not by fire, but by an art divine, boiled there below, and limed the bank on every side. I saw the pitch, but nothing in it, save the bubbles
the boiling raised, and that the whole of it kept swelling up, and settling back compressed.
While I was gazing fixedly down yonder, my Leader cried to me: “Beware, beware!”
and drew me to himself from where I was.
I then turned round, as one who longs to see the thing which it behooves him to escape, and who, when by a sudden fear unmanned,
although he sees, delays not his departure;
and I perceived behind us a black devil
come running up along the rocky crag.
Ah, how ferocious in his looks he was,
and in his actions how severe he seemed,
with wings outspread, and light upon his feet!
His shoulder, which was sharp and high, was loaded with both a sinner’s haunches, whom he held clutched tightly by the sinews of his feet.
“O Malebranche,” from our bridge he cried, “here’s one of Santa Zita’s Ancients! Put him beneath, for I’m for more of them returning to that town which I have well stocked therewith;
there, save Bonturo, everyone’s a grafter;
and let one of you advance, and hear me speak;
Before your grappling hooks take hold of me,
but he cried out: “Be none of you malicious!
and with their eyebrows threaten us with woe?”
If thou as wary art as thou art wont,
the meat with hooks into the cauldron’s midst,
Not otherwise do cooks have scullions plunge
that may be done to me, who know these things, and be not thou afraid, for any harm
that may be done to me, who know these things,
for I request no escort for myself.
“If thou know how, pray let us go alone,
and turned against him all their grappling hooks;
Have Libococco go, and Draghignazzo;
and let old Barbariccia guide the ten.
Search round about the boiling birdlime pitch;
let these be safe as far as that next crag, which all unbroken goes across the dens.” “Oh, Teacher, what is this I see?” said I.
“If thou know how, pray let us go alone,
for I request no escort for myself.
If thou as wary art as thou art wont,
dost thou not notice how they gnash their teeth,
and with their eyebrows threaten us with woe?”
And he to me: “I would not have thee frightend;
let them grin on, then, as they like, for that they’re doing at the wretches who are boiled.”

22. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Fifth Trench. Corrupt Politicians
Ere now have I seen cavalry break camp, start to attack, or be reviewed, and even,
at times, retreat, in order to escape;
scouts have I also seen upon your lands,
O Aretines; raids, too, have I beheld,
and tournaments and tilting-matches fought;
with trumpets now, and now with bells, with drums and beacon-signals made from fortresses, with native and with foreign things; but never have I seen horse, or infantry, or ship, by sign of either land or sky, set out with instrument of wind as odd as that. With the ten demons we were going on; ah, the fierce company! But in a church with saints consort, with gluttons at an inn! Upon the pitch alone was I intent, that I might see all details of the trench and of the people who were burned therein. As dolphins do, when, arching up their backs, they give the warning which bids mariners take measures for the safety of their ship; even so at times, his suffering to relieve, one of the sinners there displayed his back, and hid it in less time than lightning takes. And as in ditches at the water’s edge frogs stay with nothing but their muzzles out, and thus conceal their feet and all the rest; even so on all sides did those sinners stay; and now that Barbariccia was approaching, they likewise ‘neath the boiling pitch withdrew. I saw, and still it stirs my heart with horror, one waiting thus, as oft, while one frog stays, it happens that another scurries off. And Graffiacane, who was nearest to him, hooking his pitch-smeared tresses, pulled him up, so that an otter he appeared to me. I knew by now the names of each and all, I noted them so well when they were chosen, and, when they called each other, noticed how. “O Rubicante, see thou set thy claws upon him so, that thou peel off his skin!” the accused all cried out together then. And I: “My Teacher, if thou canst, contrive to learn who that wretch is, who thus has fallen into his adversaries’ hands.” My Leader thereupon drew near to him, and asked him whence he was, and he replied: “Of Navarre’s kingdom I a native was. My mother placed me out to serve a lord, for she had borne me to a rascal knave, who both himself and what he owned destroyed. I next in good King Thibaut’s household served, and there I set myself to practice graft, for which I pay the reckoning in this heat.” Here Ciriatto, from whose mouth protruded, as from a boar’s, a tusk on either side, caused him to feel how one of them could rip. Among bad cats the mouse had fallen now; for Barbariccia clasped him in his arms, and said: “Stand off, while I am clutching him!” Then, toward my Teacher having turned his face, he said: “Ask him again, if more thou wish to know of him, before the others rend him.” My Leader then: “Now tell me: know’st thou any, among the other sinners ‘neath the pitch, who Latin is?” And he: “Not long ago I left a man from that vicinity; would that like him I still were covered up, for I should then fear neither claw nor hook!” Here Libicocco said: “We ‘ve borne too much!” and with his hook so seized him by the arm, and tore it, that he carried off a piece. And Draghignazzo also wished to clutch him down at his legs; but their decurion then turned right around at them with threatening looks. When they were somewhat pacified again, of him, who still was looking at his wound, my Leader asked without delay: “Who, then, was he, from whom thou tookst unlucky leave, as thou hast said, to land upon the shore?” And he made answer: “That was Fra Gomita, Gallura’s man, a vessel of all fraud, who, when he held in hand his master’s foes, so dealt with them that each is glad. Their money he took, and, as he puts it, let them all off easy, and even in other offices was not a petty, but a first rate grafter. With him Don Michel Zanche of Logodoro associates; and never do their tongues feel tired out by talking of Sardinia. But oh! Look at the other grinning there! More would I say, but am afraid lest that one be making ready now to claw my skin.” Then the great provost turned toward Farfarello, who rolled his eyes as if he meant to strike, and said: “Off yonder, thou malicious bird!” “If you desire” thereat began again the terror-stricken man, “to see or hear Tuscans or Lombards, I will have some come. But let the Evil Claws here stand aside a little, that their vengeance be not feared, and I, while sitting in this very place, for one that I am, shall make seven come out, when I shall whistle, as our wont it is, when any one of us protrudes himself.” Cagnazzo at this speech his muzzle raised, and shook his head, and said: “Hear the sly trick devised by him to cast himself below!”

Then he, who frauds in great abundance had, replied to him: “Tricky indeed am I, when for my mates a greater pain I win!”

Here Alichìn could not control himself, but said, in opposition to the rest:

“I shall not gallop after thee, in case thou dive, but o’er the pitch shall beat my wings; the ridge abandoned be the bank a screen, to see if thou alone art more than we!”

Now, Reader, of a new sport shalt thou hear! Each turned his eyes the other way; and he the first, who had thereto been most opposed. The Navarrese chose well his time, stood firmly upon the ground, and, jumping suddenly, from what they purposed freed himself thereby. For this each felt himself to blame, but most the one who of the loss had been the cause; hence he moved first, and shouted: “Thou art caught!”

But little did it profit him; for wings could not outmeasure fear; as one went under, the other, flying upward, raised his breast; nor different is the speed with which a duck dives under water, when a hawk draws near, who, vexed and baffled thus, flies up again.

Then Calcabrina, angered by the flout, flew out behind him, glad that one escaped, because it let him scuffle with the other; and then, the grafter having disappeared, he turned his eyes the other way; and he, being, indeed, a fighting sparrow-hawk fitted to claw him well, they both fell down into the middle of the boiling fen.

A sudden separator was the heat; but rising thence was quite impossible, they had their wings so limed with sticky pitch. Then Barbariccia, vexed as were the rest, his mates, had four of them with all their hooks fly to the other bank; on both sides then they speedily descended to their posts, and stretched their hooks out toward the pitch-belimed, who now were cooked inside their crusted hides; and, thus embarassed, we abandoned them.

23. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Sixth Trench. Hypocrites

Silent, alone, and unaccompanied, we went along, one first and one behind, as Minor Friars go when on the road. My thoughts, by reason of the present brawl, were turned to Aesop’s fable, that wherein he talks about the frog and mouse; for ‘now’ and ‘at this moment’ are no more alike, than one is like the other, if beginning and end be linked by an attentive mind. And ev’n as one thought from another springs, so, next, from that one was another born, which doubled my first fear. Hence thus I thought:

“These devils have been scorned on our account, and with such injury and scoff, indeed, that I believe that they are greatly vexed. If anger to ill-will be joined, they ’ll come more fiercely after us, than doth a dog the rabbit which he seizes with his teeth.”

Already was I feeling all my hair bristling with fear, when, gazing back intent, I said: “If, Teacher, thou hide not thyself and me with speed, I dread the Evilclaws; we have them now behind us, and I so imagine them, that I already feel them.”

And he: “If I were made of leaded glass, thine outward image I would not reflect more quickly than thine inward I receive. Even now thy thoughts were coming among mine with outlook and intent so similar, that I with both a single purpose formed. If it be true the right bank slopeth so, that to the following trench we can descend, we shall escape from this imagined chase.”

He had not finished telling me his plan, when not far off I saw them coming on with wings outspread, intent on seizing us. My Leader then took hold of me at once, even as a mother, by the noise aroused, and seeing close to her the burning flames, she seized her child and flees, and doth not stop, since caring more for him than for herself, even long enough to clothe her with a shift; and downward from the ridge of that hard bank, his back he yielded to the hanging rock, which closes one side of the following trench. Water ne’er moved as swiftly through a sluice, to turn the overshot wheel of a mill, when closest to the paddles it approaches, as did my Teacher o’er that selvage-bank, boring me down with him upon his back, as though his son I were, and not his mate. His feet had hardly reached the trench’s bed below, when they were on the ridge above, just over us; but naught was now to fear; because the Providence on high, which willed to place them in the fifth trench as its servants, takes from them all the power of leaving it. A painted people found we there below, who, moving with exceedingly slow steps, shed tears, and in their looks appeared subdued and weary. Cloaks they had equipped with cowls lowered before their eyes, and cut like those which in Cologne are fashioned for her monks. So gilded outside are they that they dazzle; but inside all are lead, and of such weight, that those which Frederick clothed men with were straw. O cloak that wearies through eternity! We turned again, as ever, to the left, along with them, intent on their sad plaint; but, owing to the weight, that weary folk came on so slowly, that new company we had at every motion of our legs. Hence to my Leader I: “Contrive to find some one whom we may know by deed or name, and, while thus going, move thine eyes around.” And one, who heard my Tuscan speech, cried out behind us: “Stay your feet, O ye that run so quickly through the gloomy air! From me, perhaps, shalt thou receive what thou dost ask.” Thereat my Leader turned and said: “Now wait; and then proceed according to his pace.” I stopped, and two I saw, whose faces showed great mental haste to be with me, and yet their burden and the narrow path delayed them. On coming up to us, they watched me long with eyes askance, and uttered not a word; then, toward each other turning, thus they spoke: “This one seems by the action of his throat alive; but if they ’re dead, by what right, then, go they uncovered by the heavy stole?” And then, addressing me, they said: “O Tuscan, who to the gathering of sad hypocrites art come, scorn not to tell us who thou art.” And I to them: “On Arno’s lovely stream, and in its famous town, both born and bred, I’m in the body I have always had. But who are ye, adown whose cheeks there drips, as I perceive, so great a woe, and what the penalty which sparkles on you thus?” “These orange cloaks,” one answered, “are of lead, and of such thickness are they, that the weights thus cause the scales that balance them to creak. We Jovial Friars were, and Bolognese; I, Catalán, and Loderingo he, by name, and chosen by thy town together, as one alone is usually called, to keep its peace; and such we were, as still in the Gardingo’s neighborhood appears.” “O friars,” I began, “your evil deeds . . .”
thus, too, the plaster quickly reached the wound; for when we had attained the ruined bridge, my Leader turned to me with that sweet look, which at the Mountain's foot I first perceived. First having well surveyed the ruined arch, after some counsel taken with himself, his arms he opened, and took hold of me. And like a man who ponders while he acts, and always seems to look ahead; ev’n so, while upward to the top of one great rock he pushed me, he sought out another crag, and said: “Take hold of that one next, but first see whether it be fit to bear thy weight.” No path was this for one who wore a cloak, since scarcely could we two, though he was light, and I was pushed, ascend from rock to rock. And had the slope on that bank not been shorter, than on the other, I know not of him, but I would surely have been overcome; but since the whole of Malebolgé slopes down to the opening of the lowest well, such is the nature of each trench’s banks, that one is high, and low the following one; and yet we reached at length the ridge above, from which the crag’s last rock projects. My breath was so exhausted from my lungs, when up at last, that I could go no further; nay, on arriving I sat down at once. “Thus, henceforth, must thou rid thyself of sloth,” my Teacher said; “for one attains not fame, sitting on cushions, or ’neath canopies; and he that lives without attaining it, leaveth on earth such traces of himself, as smoke doth in the air, or foam in water. Therefore get up! O’ercome thy troubled breath with that soul-energy, which wins all fights, unless it sink beneath its body’s weight! A longer stairway must be climbed; ‘t is not enough that these stairs have been left; if, then, thou understand me, let it profit thee.” I thereupon arose, and showed myself better equipped with breath than I had felt, and said: “Go on, for I am strong and bold!” We took the pathway up along the crag, which rocky was, narrow and hard to climb, and steeper far than was the one before. Not to seem weak, I talked as on I went; this from the next trench caused a voice to come, which was incapable of forming words. Though I was on the summit of the arch which crosses here, I know not what it said; but moved to anger seemed the one who spoke. Downward I looked, and yet my living eyes could not attain the bottom for the dark; hence, “Teacher, try to reach the following ridge,” said I, “and let us from the wall descend, for as I hear, but do not understand, so, looking down from hence, I make out nothing.” “No other answer give I thee,” he said, “save that of action; for a fair request ought to be met by deeds without a word.” We climbed down from the bridge’s further head, where to the eighth embankment it is joined, and then the trench was clearly shown to me; and in it I beheld a frightful throng of snakes, and of so weird a kind, that still the memory of them freezes up my blood. Let Libya and her sand no longer boast; for though she breed chelydris, jàculi, with cenchi, phaërae and amphibisaenae, ne’er with all Ethiopia did she show, nor e’en with what above the Red Sea lies, either so many or such evil plagues. Among this cruel and most dismal swarm people were running, nude and terrified, and with no hope of hole or heliotrope. Their hands were bound behind their back with snakes, whose tail and head were thrust between their loins, and tied together in a knot in front. Then lo, a serpent hurled himself at one, who near our bank was standing, and transfixed him there where the neck is to the shoulders joined. Never were o or i so quickly written, as he took fire, and, burning up, must needs turn wholly into ashes as he fell; whereat, though thus destroyed upon the ground, the dust, assembling of its own accord, turned instantly into the self-same man. So likewise, as great sages have declared, the Phoenix dies, and then is born again, as she approaches her five-hundredth year; she feeds through life on neither herbs or grain, but on amòmum only and incense-tears; her final swaddling bands are nard and myrrh. And as is he who falls, nor knoweth how, by demon force, which pulls him to the ground, or other inhibition binding man, and who, on getting up again, looks round wholly bewildered by the great distress which he has felt, and, as he looks, heaves sighs;
such was that sinner, after he had risen.
O Power of God, how truly just thou art,
that in revenge dost deal such blows as these!
Thereat my Leader asked him who he was,
and he replied: “Into this wild ravine
I rained from Tuscany not long ago.
Mule that I was, a beast’s life, not a man’s,
I liked; I’m Vanni Fucci, called the Beast;
for me Pistoia was a worthy den.”
Then “Tell him not to slip away,” I said,
“and ask what fault thrust him down here; for I once saw in him a man of blood and strife.”
The sinner then, who understood, feigned not,
but turned toward me both mind and face, and said,
as with a sudden shame he colored up:
“That thou hast caught me in the misery
in which thou see’st me, gives me greater pain than that which took me from the other life.
I can’t refuse what thou dost ask of me.
I’m placed thus low, because ‘t was I who robbed
the vestry known for its fair ornaments;
a deed once falsely put upon another.
But now, lest thou enjoy this sight of me,
if thou art ever out of these dark lands,
thine ears to my announcement ope, and hear: Pistoia first despoils herself of Neri;
then Florence changes folk and government.
From Val di Magra Mars draws forth a bolt by turbid clouds enveloped; next, with wild and cruel storm, a battle will be fought upon the Picene Plain; then suddenly the bolt will cleave the mist in such a way, that every Bianco will thereby be wounded.
And this I’ve said, that it may give thee pain!”
25. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Seventh Trench. Thieves
The thief, at the conclusion of his words, liifted his hands with both their figs, and cried:
“Take that, O God, for ‘t is to Thee I show them!”
From that time onward snakes have been my friends,
for thereupon one coiled around his neck,
as if to say: “I ‘d have thee speak no more;”
another, coiling, tied his arms together,
and clinched itself so well in front of him,
that he could make no use of them at all.
Pistoia, ah, Pistoia, why not will
to burn to ashes, and no longer last, since in ill-doing thou excell’st thy seed?
In all of Hell’s dark rings I’ve seen no spirit so arrogant toward God; not even he,
who fell down headlong from the walls at Thebes.
Without another word he fled away;
whereat I saw a Centaur full of rage come crying: “Where, where is the stubborn soul?”
Not ev’n Maremma has so many snakes,
I think, as on his crupper that one had,
as far as where our human form begins.
Upon his shoulders right behind hisapse
there crouched a dragon with wide open wings;
and he sets fire to whomsoe’er he meets.
My Teacher said: “He, yonder, Cacus is,
who ‘neath the rocks that form Mount Aventine oft made a lake of blood. He travels not along the road o’er which his brethren go, because of having fraudulently robbed
the famous herd which he as neighbor had;
this ended his sly deeds beneath the club of Hercules, who may perhaps have dealt him a hundred blows, whereof he felt but ten.” While thus he spoke, that sinner, too, made off;
whereat three spirits came and stood below us,
whom neither I nor even my Leader noticed, until they all cried out: “Who then are ye?” because of which our conversation ceased, for afterward we heeded them alone.
I knew them not; but so it happened then,
as it is wont to do in certain cases,
that one perforce employed another’s name, saying: “But where can Cianfa have remained?” Hence, that my Leader might give heed, I placed my finger in a line from chin to nose.
If thou art slow now, Reader, to believe what I shall tell, no marvel will it be,
for I, who saw it, hardly grant I did.
As toward them I was holding up my brows, lo, a six-footed serpent hurls itself
in front of one, and clings to him all over;
with both its middle feet it clasped his paunch,
and with its fore feet seized upon his arms;
then with its teeth it wounded both his cheeks;
its hind feet put out along his thighs,
and thrusting next its tail between the two,
set it upward all along his back.
Ivy was never rooted to a tree
so fast, as round about the other’s limbs that horrible wild creature twined its own. And thereupon, as if hot wax they were, they stuck together, and their colors mixed, till neither seemed to be what it had been; just as a browish hue precedes the flame on burning paper which is not yet black, while, equally, the white part dies away. The other two looked on, and each exclaimed: “O me, Agnello, what a change is thine! for see, thou now art neither two nor one.” Already into one had both heads turned, when we two countenances still beheld mixed in a single face, where both were lost. From the four previous strips two arms were made; the thighs and legs, the belly and the chest became such members as were never seen. Cancelled therein was every former aspect; the transformed figure seemed both two and none; and thus appearing slowly moved away. As like a lightning-flash a lizard looks, if, changing hedges ’neath the dog-day’s scourage, across a road it passes; even such a little fiery serpent seemed to me, as toward the bellies of the other two it came, livid and black as peppercorn. And in that part through which our nourishment is first received, it transfixed one of them, and then fell down, stretched out in front of him. The pierced man gazed at it, but nothing said; nay, firmly on his feet he stood, and yawned, as if attacked by fever or by sleep. He at the serpent looked, and it at him; one through his wound, the other through its mouth smoked hard, and each smoke with the other mingled. The legs and with them ev’n the very thighs, the belly and the chest became such members as were never seen. The soul which had become a savage beast divides itself, while in the other case, the split one closes, and the smoking stops. The pierced man gazed at it, but nothing said; nay, firmly on his feet he stood, and yawned, as if attacked by fever or by sleep. He at the serpent looked, and it at him; one through his wound, the other through its mouth smoked hard, and each smoke with the other mingled. Let Lucan, then, be silent, where he tells of poor Sabelius’ and Nassidius’ fate, and, giving heed, hear what is now proclaimed. Of Cadmus, and of Arethusa, too, let Ovid cease to speak; for though his verse smoked hard, and each smoke with the other mingled. The legs and with them ev’n the very thighs so stuck together, that in little time their juncture left no mark that could be seen. The cloven tail was taking on the shape which there was being lost; the skin of one, meanwhile, was growing soft, and hard the other’s. I saw his arms withdraw into his armpits, and both the serpent’s feet, which were not long, lengthen as much, as those were growing short. And then its hinder feet, together twisted, became the member which a man conceals, while from his own the wretch had two thrust forth. And while the smoke was veiling both of them with novel hues, and generated hair on one side, and deprived of it the other, the one stood up, and down the other fell, nor turned aside for that the impious eyes, beneath which each of them was changing face. The one who stood, drew his in toward his temples; and from the excessive matter coming there ears issued on his undeveloped cheeks; and that, which ran not back, but was retained, of this superfluous matter, gave the face a nose, and thickened suitably its lips. He who was lying down thrusts forth his muzzle, and backward through his head withdraws his ears, even as a snail doth with its horns; his tongue, which single used to be, and prompt to speech, divides itself, while in the other case, the split one closes, and the smoking stops. The soul which had become a savage beast flees hissing through the trench; the other spits behind him as he talks. Then, having turned away from him his just created shoulders, he to the third said: “I ’d have Buoso run, as I have, on his belly o’er this path.” I thus beheld the seventh balast change and interchange; here let its novelty excuse me, if it slightly blur my pen. And though somewhat bewildered were my eyes, and though confused my mind, those men could not escape so secretly, that I should fail Puccio Sciancato perfectly to see; and of the three companions who came first, he only was not changed; the other one was he, for whom, Gavilè, thou dost weep.

26. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Eighth Trench. Fraudulent Counselors

Rejoice, O Florence, since thou art so great, that thou dost beat thy wings o’er sea and land, while ev’n through Hell thy name is spread abroad! Among the thieves five such as these I found, thy citizens, whence shame accuses to me, nor to great honor risest thou thereby. But if the truth be dreamed at dawn’s approach, thou ’lt feel a little while from now what Prato, of others not to speak, is craving for thee; and were it now, it would not be too soon; so were it, then, since thus it needs must be! for it will grieve me more, the more I age. We went away, and up the flight of stairs, the bourne had formed for our descent before, my Teacher climbed again, and drew me with him; and as we followed up the lonely path among the rocks and boulders of the crag, our feet proceeded not without our hands. I sorrowed then, and now again I sorrow, when I direct my mind to what I saw, and curb my genius more than I am wont, lest it should run when virtue guides it not; that, if a kindly star, or aught that’s better, have blest me, I myself may not regret it.
As many glow-worms as the countryman,— who on the hillside takes his rest, when he,
who lights the world, least hides his face from us,
while to the gnat the fly is giving way,
—sees down along the valley where, perchance,
his grapes, or ploughs his field;
with just as many flames the whole eighth trench was gleaming bright, as I perceived at once, when I was where its bottom came in view.

As he who by the bears avenged himself, beheld Elijah's chariot when it left,
and when to heaven its horses rose erect,
since he could not so trace it with his eyes,
as to see more than just the flame alone,
when like a little cloud it rose on high;
of such a nature were the flames that moved along the gulley of the ditch, for none displays its theft, though each a sinner hides.

Risen up to look, I so stood on the bridge,
that without being pushed I would have fallen,
had I not grasped a great projecting rock.
My Leader, who perceived me thus intent,
then said: "The spirits are within the fires,
and each is swathed by that wherewith he burns."

"My Teacher," I replied, "I'm more assured through hearing thee, but deemed it so already,
and wished to ask thee: 'Who is in the flame which comes along so cloven at the top, that from the pyre it seems to rise, whereon Etèocles was with his brother placed?'"

He answered me: "Therein are both Ulysses and Diomed tormented, who in pain
thus go together, as they did in wrath;
and in that flame of theirs they now bewail
the ambush of the horse, which made the gate,
from which the Roman's noble seed went forth;
there they lament the trick, because of which Deidamia, dead, still mourns Achilles;
the Palladium’s penalty is paid."

"If they can speak within those sparks," said I,
"I pray thee, Teacher, much, and pray again that mine be worth to thee a thousand prayers, refuse not my request to linger here until the tormented flame come this way; thou see'st that toward it I'm inclined by great desire."
And he replied to me: "Thy prayer deserves much praise and therefore I accede to it, but see thou that thy tongue restrain itself.
Leave speech to me, who have a clear idea of what thou wouldst; for they, since Greeks they were,
might be, perchance, disdainful of thy words."
After the flame had come so near to us,
that time and place seemed fitting to my Leader,
it was in this fashion that I heard him speak:
"O ye that in a single flame are two,
if I deserved of you, when still alive,
if I deserved of you or much or little,
when in the world I wrote the lofty verses, depart not; but let one of you inform us whither, when lost, he went away to die."
The greater horn then of the ancient flame began to quiver with a murmuring sound, as would a flame made weary by the wind;
and then, while swaying here and there its tip,
as if the latter were the tongue that spoke,
gave forth a voice, and said: "When I departed from Circe, who concealed me near Gaeta more than a year before Aeneas so had named the place, nor fondness for my son, nor pious reverence for my aged father, nor ev'n the bounden love which should have cheered Penelope, could overcome within me
the eagerness I had to gain experience both of the world, and of the vice and worth of men; but forth I put upon the deep and open sea with but a single ship, and with that little company, by whom
I had not been deserted. Both its shores
I then beheld, as far away as Spain, Morocco and the island of the Sards,
and all the rest that sea bathes round about.
Both old and slow were I and my companions, when we attained that narrow passage-way,
where Hercules set up those signs of his,
which warned men not to sail beyond their bounds;
Seville I left behind me on the right hand, Ceuta I'd left already on the other.
And then I said: 'O brothers, ye who now have through a hundred thousand perils reached the West, to this so short a waking-time still left your senses, will not to refuse experience of that world behind the sun which knows not man! Bethink you of the seed whence ye have sprung; for ye were not created to lead the life of stupid animals, but manliness and knowledge to pursue.'
So eager for the voyage did I make my fellows by this little speech of mine, that, after it, I hardly could have checked them.
Hence, to the morning having turned our stern,
we with our oars made wings for our mad flight, e’er veering toward the left as on we sped.
Night was already seeing all the stars of the other pole, and our pole so low down, that from the ocean’s floor it never rose.
Five times rekindled, and as often quenched, had been the light beneath the moon, since first we entered on the passage of the deep,
when lo, a mountain loomed before us, dim by reason of the distance, and so high it seemed to me, that I had seen none such.
And we rejoiced; but soon our happiness was turned to grief; for from the newfound land
a whirlwind rose, and smote our vessel’s prow;
three times it made her whirl with all the waters;
then at the fourth it made her stern go up,
and prow go down, even as Another pleased, till over us the ocean’s waves had closed.”

27. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Eighth Trench. Fraudulent Counselors

The flame, because of having ceased to speak, was quiet and erect, and now away from us was going with the gentle Poet’s leave;
when lo, another, which behind it came,
caused us to turn our eyes up toward its tip, by reason of a vague sound issuing thence.
As the Sicilian bull (which bellowed first with the lament of him, and that was right, who with his file had given form to it,) was wont to bellow with the voice of him who suffered in it, so that, though of brass, it seemed the one who by the pain was pierced;
even so, since from the body of the flame
they had nor path nor mouth, the painful words were changed at first into the latter’s tongue.
But when these words had travelled to the tip,
and given it that vibration which the tongue,
when uttered, gave to them, we heard it say: “O thou, to whom I now address my voice, and who just now didst talk in Lombard, saying:
‘Now go thy way, for thee I urge no more;’
though I, perhaps, have somewhat late arrived, be not displeased to stop and speak with me;
thou see’st that I am not, although I burn!
If into this blind world thou only now
art fallen down from that sweet Latin land, whence all my guilt I bring, pray tell me whether the Romagnoles are having peace or war;
for I came from the mountains ’tween Urbino and that high peak from which the Tiber springs.”

While downward I was leaning still intent,
my Leader touched me on my side, and said:
“Speak thou, for this one an Italian is.”
And I, who had my answer all prepared, both how and why I’d have thee hear from me. While I was still the shape of bones and flesh my mother gave me, my performances were not a lion’s, but a fox’s deeds. All covert practices and hidden ways I knew; and I so carried on their arts, that to the ends of earth their fame was noised. When I perceived at last that I had reached that period of my life, when each should strike his sails and coil his ropes, what hitherto had given me pleasure I thereat disliked; I yielded then, repenting and confessing, and that, alas, poor me! I would have availed. The Prince of modern Pharisees, who then hard by the Lateran had a war on hand, though not with either Saracens or Jews, for Christian were all enemies of his, and none of them had gone to conquer Acre, or been a merchant in the Soldan’s land; not heeding in himself his lofty office and holy orders, or in me the cord, which leaner used to make those girt therewith; but as upon Soracte Constantine once bade Sylvester heal his leprosy; so this one called on me, as master-leech, to cure him of the fever of his pride; he asked me for advice, but I kept still, because his words were like a drunkard’s words. And then he said: ‘Let not thy heart mistrust; I from now on absolve thee; teach me, then, how I can Palestrina overthrow. To lock and unlock Heaven is in my power, as thou dost know; two, therefore, are the Keys, my predecessor held in small esteem.’ His weighty words then drove me to the point, at which the silent course appeared the worse; ‘Father,’ I therefore said, ‘since from the sin thou wasthe me, which I must now commit, a promise long drawn out but shortly kept will cause thy triumph on the lofty seat.’ Then Francis came for me, when I was dead; but one of our black Cherubs said to him: ‘ Remove him not, and do no wrong to me! Among my menials he must needs descend, because he gave the fraudulent advice, since which till now I’ve had him by the hair; for who repents not cannot be absolved, nor yet can one at once repent and will, the contradiction not permitting it!’ O woeful me! O how I shook with fear, when, after laying hold on me, he said: ‘Perhaps thou didst not think me a logician!’ He carried me to Minos, and the latter round his hard back eight times entwined his tail, and when in great rage he had bitten it, ‘A sinner of the thievish fire is this,’ he said; hence, where thou see’st me, I am lost, and, thus robed, sorrowing go my way.” When he had thus completed his discourse, the flame departed from us with its grief, twisting and lashing its sharp-pointed horn.

I and my Leader then passed further on up o’er the crag, as far as the next arch which spans the ditch, wherein their due is paid to those who burdens win by severing bonds.

28. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Ninth Trench. Sowers of Discord

Who ever could, ev’n with unfettered words, tell fully of the blood and of the wounds which now I saw, though oft he told the tale? All tongues would certainly fall short of it, by reason of our speech and of our mind, whose means are small for taking in so much. If all the people should again assemble, who on Apulia’s fortune-ravaged soil suffered of old from all the loss of blood shed by the Trojans, and in that long war, which with its spoil of rings made such high heaps, as Livy writes, who maketh no mistakes; with those who felt the painful force of blows received in waging war with Robert Guiscard, and those whose bones are still heaped up together at Ceperano, where a faithless liar was each Apulian, and near Tagliacozzo, where old Alardo won, though all unarmed; and if, of these, one showed a limb pierced through, and one a limb lopped off, ‘t would all be nothing, compared with this ninth trench’s foul display. No cask, indeed, by loss of middle-board or stave, is opened as was one I saw, split from the chin to where one breaketh wind; while down between his legs his entrails hung, his pluck appeared, and that disgusting sack, which maketh excrement of what is swallowed. While I on seeing him was all intent, he looked at me, and opening with his hands his breast, he said: “See now how I am cloven! Behold how torn apart Mahomet is! Ali in tears moves on ahead of me, cloven in his face from forelock down to chin; and all the others whom thou seest here disseminators were, when still alive, of strife and schism, and hence are cloven thus. There is a devil here behind, who thus fiercely adorns, and to the sword’s edge puts each member of this company anew, when we have gone around the woeful road; because, ere one return in front of him, the wounds thus made have all been closed again. But who art thou, that musest on the crag, perhaps to put off going to the torture adjudged thine accusation of thyself?” “Death hath not reached him yet,” replied my Teacher, “nor to a torment is he led by guilt, but that complete experience may be giv’n him, I, who am dead, must needs conduct him here from circle unto circle down through Hell; and this is true, as that I speak to thee.” On hearing him, more were there than a hundred who stopped there in the ditch to look at me, and who through their surprise forgot their pain. “To Fra Dolcino do thou therefore say, thou that, perhaps, wilt shortly see the sun, if soon he would not hither follow me, to arm him so with food, lest stress of snow should give the Novarese a victory, which else would not be easily obtained.” When one foot he had raised to go away, Mahomet said these words to me; which done, upon the ground he stretched it to depart. Another then, who had his neck pierced through, his nose cut off as far as ‘neath his brows, and who had one ear only, having stopped to gaze in wonder with the others there, opened, before the rest, his throat, whose neck vermilion was on every side, and said: “O thou that by thy guilt art not condemned, and whom up in the Latin land I ’ve seen, unless too great resemblance play me false, call Pier da Medicina to thy mind, if e’er thou see again the lovely plain, which from Vercelli slopes to Marcabò. And make it known to Fano’s two best men, to Messer Guido and Angiolelo, too, that they, unless foreseeing be in vain down here, will from their vessel be cast forth, and drowned in sacks near La Cattòlica, through a disloyal tyrant’s treachery. Between the isles Majolica and Cyprus Neptune ne’er saw so great a crime committed by pirates, nay, nor by the Argolic folk. That traitor who sees only with one eye, and holds the town, from seeing which, one now is with me here, who fain would fasting be, will to a conference have them come with him; he “Il then so act, that ’gainst Focara’s wind they ’ll stand in need of neither vow nor prayer.” And I to him: “Point out and show to me, if news of thee thou ’dst have me bear above, which is the one who had the bitter sight.” Thereat he laid his hand upon the jaw of one of his companions, oped his mouth, and cried: “This is the one, for he speaks not; when exiled, he removed all doubt in Caesar, by saying that a man, when once prepared, ne’er brooked delay but to his detriment.” Oh, how dismayed that Curio seemed to me, who from his throat now had his tongue cut out, yet once had been so daring in his speech! Then one, from whom both hands had been lopped off, raising his maimed arms through the gloomy air, so that his blood befouled his face, cried out: “Mosca will thou remember, too, who said, alas! ’What ’s done is done!’ a speech which proved the seed of evil for the Tuscan race.” “And death” I thereto added, “to thy tribe!” Then he, as woe on woe he heaped, went off, as one would whom his grief had made insane. But I remained to look upon the throng, and such a thing I saw as I should be afraid to tell of without further proof; if it were not that conscience reassures me, the good companion which, beneath the breastplate of conscious purity, emboldens man. I really saw, and still I seem to see it, a trunk without a head, which moved along, as moved the others of the mournful herd; and by the hair it held the severed head, which, hanging like a lantern from its hand, was saying as it gazed at us: “O me!”
With his own self he made himself a lamp, and two in one they were, and one in two; how this can be, He knows who so ordains. When at the bridge’s very foot he was, he raised his arm above him, head and all, that he might thus bring near to us his words, which were: “Now see my baneful punishment, thou that, though breathing, go’st to see the dead! See whether any be as great as this! And that thou with thee mayst bear news of me, know that Bertran de Born I am, the man who gave the youthful king the ill support. Of sire and son I mutual rebels made; Ahithophel by Absalom and David, with his malicious goadings, did no more. Because I severed those who thus were joined, I bear my brain around with me, alas! severed from its foundation in this trunk; retaliation thus is seen in me.”

29. The Eighth Circle. Fraud
The Tenth Trench. Falsifiers of Metals

The many people and unheard-of wounds had caused my eyes to be so drunk with tears, that fain they were to linger there and weep; but Virgil said: “At what art gazing still? Why is it that thine eyes still rest down there among the wretched mutilated shades? Thou didst not thus when in the other trenches; consider, then, if thou propose to count them, that this trench circles two-and-twenty miles, and that the moon is now beneath our feet; short is the time allowed us still, and more there is to see, than what thou seest here.” “If thou hadst heeded” I thereat replied, “the reason for my gazing there, thou wouldst, perhaps, have granted me a longer stay.” Meantime my Leader on his way was going, and I behind him moving, as I made my answer, adding: “In that hollow place, whereon I kept mine eyes so steadily, I think a spirit sprung from mine own blood bewails the fault so dearly paid for there.” Thereat my Teacher said: “Let not thy thoughts hereafter break on him; heed other things, and there let him remain; for at the foot of that small bridge I saw him point thee out, and with his finger fiercely threaten thee; Geri del Bello I then heard him called. So wholly wast thou then intent on him who formerly possessed Hautefort, that thou, till he departed, didst not look beyond. “Leader,” said I, “his death by violence, which is not yet avenged for him by any who shared the shame, made him indignant; that, as I believe, was why he went away without addressing me; he thus has caused me to pity him the more.” We thus conversed till we had reached the first place on the crag, whence, had there been more light, the next ravine had to its very bottom been revealed. When we o’er Malebolgè’s final cloister were situated so, that its lay-brethren could be perceived by us, uncouth laments, which had their arrow-heads with pity barbed, so pierced me through and through, that with my hands I closed mine ears. Such pain as there would be, if from the hospitals of Val di Chiana, Maremma and Sardinia, from July until September, all diseases came together in one ditch; such was it here; and out of it there came a stench, like that which out of rotting limbs is wont to come. Adown the last bank of the lengthy crag we went, as ever to the left; and then much clearer was my vision toward the bottom, wherein the servant of the Most High Lord, Justice infallible, is punishing the falsifiers she recordeth here. I do not think it were a sadder sight to see the whole race in Aegina sick, when so suffused with poison was the air, that all the animals, down to the little worm, fell dead, and when the ancient race of people, according to what poets hold for truth, out of the seed of ants restored themselves; than now it was, to see the spirits languish down in that gloomy ditch in different heaps. One on his belly lay, and others leaned against each other’s shoulders, while another crawled on all fours along the dismal path. Without conversing, step by step we moved, both looking at and listening to the sick, who could not raise their bodies. Two of these I then saw sitting and against each other leaning, just as a pan against a pan is leaned to warm, and spotted o’er with scabs from head to foot; and never have I seen a curry-comb plied by a boy, for whom his master waited, or by one who kept awake against his will, as each oft plied upon himself the edge of finger-nails for the great rage of itching, which hath else no help; their nails kept scraping down their scabs, as doth a knife the scales of bream, or fish of other kinds equipped with larger scales. “O thou that with thy fingers flay’st thyself,” to one of them my Leader then began, “and who at times dost pincers make of them, pray tell us whether Latin any be of those in here, so may thy nails suffice thee for thy work eternally.” “We, both of us, whom thou beholdest here so spoiled, are Latin,” answered one who wept, “but who art thou that didst inquire of us?” My Leader thereupon said: “I am one who with this living man from ledge to ledge descend, and who propose to show him Hell.” Thereat the common back was broken up, and trembling each of them turned round toward me, with others who had heard him by rebound. Then my good Teacher drew close up to me, and said: “Say whatsoe’er thou wilt to them.” Hence, since he so had wished it, I began: “So may your memory never fly away from human minds in that first world of ours, but rather under many suns survive, pray tell me who ye are, and of what people; nor let your foul and loathsome punishment make you afraid to show yourselves to me.” “I of Arezzo was; and Albero da Siena had me burned;” one then replied, “but what I died for doth not bring me here. ‘T is true I said to him, although in jest, that I knew how to raise me in the air; and he, who, curious, had but little sense, wished me to show that art to him; and only because I did not make him Daedalus, he had me burned by one, who treated him as son. But to the last trench of the ten Minos, who may not make mistakes, condemned me for the alchemy I practised in the world.” Then to the Poet I: “Now was there ever a people as vainglorious as the men of Siena? Surely not the French by far!” Whereat the other leprous one, who heard me, replied to what I said: “Excepting Stricca, who moderation knew in what he spent; and Niccolò, who was the first to find the costly use of cloves in gardens where such seed takes root; excepting, too, the company, on whom Càccia d’ Asciàn wasted his vineyard and great forest land, while d’ Abbagliato squandered all his sense. But so that thou mayst know who backs thee thus against the men of Siena, point thine eyes toward me, that well my face may answer thee; so shalt thou see that I’m Capocchio’s shade, who metals falsified by alchemy; and thou, if well I see thee, shouldst recall how good an ape of nature I was once.”

30. The Eighth Circle. Fraud. The Tenth Trench Falsifiers of Persons, Money, and Words

When Juno, on account of Semele, was angry with the royal blood of Thebes, as several times she showed herself to be, so fiercely mad did Athamas become, that, when he saw his wife approaching him, burdened by her two sons on either side, “Spread we the nets,” he cried, “that I may take, upon their passing, lioness and cubs!” and thereupon stretched out his cruel claws, and taking hold of one, Learchus named, whirled him around, and dashed him ’gainst a rock; his wife then with the other drowned herself. Again, when Fortune so low down had brought the Trojans’ arrogant, all-daring power, that with their kingdom shattered was their king; Hecuba, sad, forlorn, and captive now, when she had seen her dead Polyxena, and in her painful anguish had perceived her Polydorus lying on the beach, out of her senses, barked as would a dog; so greatly had her suffering turned her mind. But ne’er did furies or of Thebes or Troy reveal in any one such cruelty, in goading beasts or, much less, human limbs, as that which I beheld in two death-pale and naked shades, who ran around, and bit, as doth a boar, when from the sty let out. One reached Capocchio, and so thrust his tusks into his neck behind, that, dragging him, he made his belly scrape the solid ground.
The Aretine, still trembling, said to me:
"That imp is Gianni Schicchi who, enraged, goes all around ill-treating others thus."

Then "Oh," said I to him, "so may the other not fix his teeth in thee, be not too tired to tell me who he is, before he 'skips'!"

And he to me: "That is the ancient soul of wicked Myrrha, who, outside the bounds of lawful love, became her father's mistress.
She came to sin with him by counterfeiting another's person in herself, as dared the other one who yonder goes away, — that he might gain the lady of the stud, — to counterfeit Buoso Donati's self,
and make his will and give it legal form."

When the two furious souls, on whom my eyes were fixed, had passed away, I turned them round to look upon the other evil born.

And one I saw, who like a lute were shaped,
if he had only had his groin cut off down in the region where a man is forked.

The heavy dropsy which unmates the limbs
in such a way with ill-digested humor, that face and paunch no longer correspond,
causing him to keep his lips apart,
as doth the hectic, who, because of thirst,
turns one lip chinward, and the other up.

"O ye that are, and wherefore I know not,
free from all torment in this world of woe," said he to us, "behold, and pay attention to Master Adam's wretched misery!

When living, I had all that I desired,
and now, alas, I crave a drop of water.

The little brooks which toward the Arno run down from the Casentino's green-clad hills, and render all their channels cool and fresh,
are evermore before me, nor in vain;
because their image makes me drier far than this disease, which strips my face of flesh.

The rigid Justice, which is scourging me, takes from the very place in which I sinned
the means to give my sighs a greater flight.

There lies Romena, where I falsified
the coin on which the Baptist's form is stamped;
for that I left my body burned above.

But could I see the woeful soul of Guido, or Alexander, or their brother, here,
for Fonte Branda I 'd not give the sight.

One is in here already, if the shades,
who go around here raging, tell the truth,
but what is that to me whose limbs are bound?

If only I were still so light of foot, that I could in a hundred years advance
one inch, I 'd be already on the road,
in search of him among the loathsome people,
although this trench goes round eleven miles,
and is no less than half a mile across.

Through them am I in such a family,
for they persuaded me to coin the florins, which had at least three carats of alloy." 31. The Edge of the Central Well
The Giants

One and the selfsame tongue first wounded me, so that it colored both my cheeks, and then supplied me with the medicine required; Achilles’ and his father’s lance, I hear, was likewise wont to be the source of, first, a sad, and, after, of a grateful gift.

We turned our backs upon the woeful vale over the bank which girds it round about, and passed across without a single word. Here less than night it was, and less than day, so that my sight advanced not far; but here I heard a horn give forth so loud a sound, that it had rendered any thunder faint; this led mine eyes, as counter to its path they followed, wholly to a single place. After the woeful rout, when Charlemagne the holy army of his knights had lost, Roland blew not so terrible a blast. I had not kept my head turned toward it long, when many lofty towers I seemed to see; therefore: “Teacher, say what town is this?”

“Since through the darkness from too far away thou peerest,” he replied, “it comes about that afterward thou errest in conceiving. If yonder thou attain, thou’lt clearly see how from afar one’s senses are deceived; hence onward urge thyself a little more.” Thereat he took my hand with kindly care, and said to me: “Ere further on we go, so that the fact may seem less strange to thee, know, then, that towers they are not, but Giants; and all of them are standing around the bank, each from his navel down.”

As, when a fog is thinning off, one’s gaze little by little giveth shape to that, which, since it packs the air, the mist conceals; even so, as through the dense, dark air I pierced, and nearer drew and nearer to the brink, error in me took flight, and fear increased; for, as upon its round enclosing walls Montereggione crowns itself with towers; thus o’er the margin which surrounds the well with one half of their bodies towered up those frightful Giants, whom, when from the sky he thunders, Jupiter is threatening still.

His face appeared to me as long and big as is at Rome the pine-cone of Saint Peter’s, and in proportion to it were his other bones; so that the bank, which from his middle down an apron was, showed quite so much of him above it, that of reaching to his hair three Frisians would have made a useless boast; for I full thirty spans of him perceived, down from the place at which one buckles cloaks.

“Rafel mai amech zabi et almi” the frightful mouth, to which no sweeter psalms were fitting, thereupon began to cry. Then toward him cried my Leader: “Foolish soul, keep to thy horn, and vent thyself therewith, when wrath or other passion seizes thee! Search at thy neck, and thou wilt find the cord which holds it tied, O spirit of confusion, and see it lying on thy mighty breast.”

To me then: “Self-accused he stands, for this is Nimrod, to whose evil thought is due that more than one tongue in the world is spoken. Let us leave him alone, nor talk in vain; for such is every tongue to him, as his to others is, for that is known to none. Then, turning to the left, we travelled on much further; and within a crossbow’s shot we found the next one far more large and fierce. What was the master’s power who girded him, I cannot say; but this one had in front his left arm, and behind his back his right, tied by a chain, which downward from his neck held him so bound, that on the uncovered part it wound around as far as the fifth coil.

My Leader said to me: “Gainst Jove Most High this proud soul wished to test his strength, and hence hath this reward. Ephialtes is his name; his haughty undertaking he attempted what time the Giants caused the Gods to fear;
the arms he plied he moveth now no more."
And I to him: "If possible it be,
I'd gladly have these eyes of mine enjoy experience of the measureless Briareus." Then he replied: "Antaeus thou 'lt behold not far from here, who speaks, and, since unbound, can set us at the bottom of all sin.
He is much further on, whom thou wouldst see,
and bound he is, and shaped like this one, save that more ferocious in his looks he seems."
There never was an earthquake strong enough to shake a tower with so much violence, as Ephialtes quickly shook at this.
Then more than ever yet did I fear death,
nor for it was there need of more than fear,
had it not been that I perceived his bonds.
We thereupon proceeded further still,
and to Antaeus came, who full five ells, beside his head, protruded from the pit.
"O thou that in the valley fortune-blest, which once caused Scipio to inherit glory
when with his followers Hannibal took flight, and who, hadst thou been at thy brethren's war on high, it seems that it is still believed the Sons of Earth had been the victors there; pray set us down below, nor let disdain affect thee, where the cold locks up Cocytus.
Make us not go to Tityus or to Tiphoeus;
this man can give what most is longed for here;
stoop, then, nor twist thy muzzle. He can still give fame to thee on earth, since he is living, and still looks forward to long life, if Grace recall him not untimely to itself."
The Teacher thus; then he in haste stretched out the hands, whose mighty pressure Hercules once felt, and took my Leader. Virgil then, on feeling himself taken, said to me:
"Come here, that I may take thee up;" and then so did, that he and I one bundle were.
Such as the Carisenda seems, when viewed beneath its leaning side, whene'er a cloud sails o'er it so, that opposite it hangs;
such did Antaeus seem to me, who watched to see him stoop, and such a moment 't was,
that I had gladly gone another road.
But lightly at the bottom, which devours Judas and Lucifer, he set us down;
nor, thus bent over, did he linger there,
but raised himself, as on a ship a mast.

32. The Ninth Circle. Treachery. Cocytus
Traitors to their Relatives, and to their Country

If I had rhymes that were as harsh and hoarse
as would be fitting for the dismal hole,
on which lean all the other circling rocks, I'd squeeze the juice of my conception out more fully; but because I have them not,
not without fear do I resolve to speak;
for to describe the bottom of the universe is not an enterprise wherewith to jest, nor for a tongue that says 'mamma' and 'dad';
let, then, those Ladies give my verse their aid,
who helped Amphion build the walls of Thebes, that from the facts the telling differ not.
Oh rabble, that, ill-born beyond all people,
are in a place, to speak of which is hard,
far better had ye here been sheep or goats!
When we were down within the gloomy well,
beneath the Giant's feet, though lower far,
and I still gazing at its lofty wall,
I heard one say to me: "Look where thou walkest!
and see that with thy feet thou trample not the heads of us two wretched, weary brothers!" Thereat I turned around, and saw before me,
and 'neath my feet, a lake which, being frozen, seemed to be made of glass and not of water.
The Danube up in Austria never made so thick a veil in winter for its course, nor yonder 'neath the cold sky did the Don,
as what was here; for even if Tambernich had fallen on it, or had Pietrapana, it had not cracked even at its very edge.
And as a frog remains, to do its croaking, with muzzle out of water, in the season
when oft the peasant dreams that she is gleaning;
even so, as far as where one's shame is shown,
the woeful shades were livid in the ice,
as to the notes of storks they set their teeth.
Each kept his face turned downward; from his mouth,
the cold, and from his eyes, his saddened heart provides itself a witness in their midst.
When I had gazed around a while, I looked down at my feet, and two I saw with heads so close together, that their hair was mixed.
"Ye that are pressing thus your breasts together,
say who ye are," said I. They bent their necks, and when their faces had been raised toward me, their eyes, moist only inwardly before, gushed upward though the lids; whereat the cold, binding the tears between them, closed them up. A clamp ne'er bound so tightly board to board; whereat, so great the anger mastering them, like two he-goats, they butted one another. And one who had, by reason of the cold, lost both his ears, with face still lowered, said: "Why dost thou mirror thee so much on us? If thou wouldst know who those two near thee are, the valley from which thy Bisenzio flows belonged to their sire Albert and to them. They issued from one body; and thou canst search through all Caìna, but thou 'lt never find a shade more worthy to be fixed in ice; not he, whose breast and shadow broken were by one same blow at Arthur's hand; nor yet Focaccia; nor this fellow here, whose head so blocks me, that I cannot see beyond, and who was Sàssol Mascheroni called; who he was, thou, if Tuscan, now knowst well. And that thou put me to no further speech, know, then, that I was Camiciòn de' Pazzi, and that, to excuse me, I await Carlìn." Thereafter I beheld a thousand faces made doglike by the cold; hence frozen ponds cause me to shudder now, and always will. And now, while toward that center we were moving, whereto all heavy objects gravitate, and I was trembling in the eternal cold; I know not whether it were will, or fate, or chance; but as I walked among the heads, hard in the face of one I struck my foot. Weeping he scolded: "Wherefore dost thou smite me? Unless thou comest to increase the vengeance for Mont' Aperti, why dost thou molest me?" And I said: "Teacher, wait now for me here, that I through him may issue from a doubt; then at thy pleasure shalt thou hurry me." My Leader stopped; and I to him, who still was savagely blaspheming, said: "What sort of man art thou, that scoldest people so?" "Now who art thou, that goest" he replied, "through Antenora, smiting cheeks so roughly, that it would be too much, wert thou alive?" "I am alive, and it may profit thee" was my reply, "for me to place thy name, if fame thou ask, among my other notes." And he: "I crave the contrary; away with thee, and bother me no more; for ill dost thou know how to flatter in this bog!" Thereat I seized him by the nape, and said: "It needs must be that thou reveal thy name, or that no hair remain upon thee here!" Then he to me: "Though thou pull out my hair, I 'll neither say, nor show thee, who I am, fall thou upon my head a thousand times." I had his hair wrapped round my hand already, and more than one shock had I plucked from him, while he was barking, with his eyes turned down; when here another cried: "What ails thee, Bocca? Is making noise with jawbones not enough, unless thou bark? What devil touches thee?" "Henceforth" said I, "I 'would not have thee speak, perfidious traitor; for true news of thee I 'll carry with me to thy lasting shame." "Begone, and tell whate'er thou wilt;" he answered, but be not silent, if thou issue hence, of him who had just now his tongue so ready. He here bewails the money of the French; 'Him of Duera' thou canst say, 'I saw where cold the days are for the sinful folk.' And if thou shouldst be asked who else was there, thou hast beside thee him of Beccherìa, who had his gorget cut in two by Florence. Gianni de' Soldanier is further on, I think, with Ganelon, and Tebaldello, who, while its people slept, unlocked Faenza." From him we had departed now, when two I saw, so frozen in a single hole, that one man's head served as the other's cap. And as because of hunger bread is eaten, even so the upper on the other set his teeth, where to the nape the brain is joined. Not otherwise did Tydeus gnaw the temples of Menalippus out of spite, than this one was gnawing at the skull and other parts. "O thou that showest by a sign so beastly hatred toward him thou eatest, tell me why," said I to him, "on this express condition, that shouldst thou rightfully of him complain, I, knowing who ye are, and that one's sin, may quit thee for it in the world above, if that, wherewith I speak, be not dried up." 33. The Ninth Circle. Treachery. Cocytus
Traitors to their Country, and to their Guests

From his grim meal that sinner raised his mouth, and wiped it on the hair of that same head, which he had spoiled behind. He then began:

“Thou wouldst that I renew a hopeless grief, the thought of which already breaks my heart, before I speak of it. But if my words are likely to be seeds, and bear the fruit of infamy upon the traitor whom I gnaw, speaking and weeping shalt thou see together. I know not who thou art, nor by what means thou’rt come down here, but when I hear thee speak, thou truly seemst to me a Florentine. Know, then, that I Count Ugolino was, and this man here Ruggieri, the Archbishop; and now I’l tell thee why I’m thus his neighbor. That, as the outcome of his evil thoughts, I, trusting him, was seized, and afterward was put to death, there is no need to say; but that which thou canst not have heard, that is, how cruel was my death, thou now shalt hear, and whether he have wronged me thou shalt know. A narrow slit within the moulding-tower, which bears, because of me, the name of Hunger, and in whose walls still others must be locked, had through its opening shown me many a moon already, when I had the evil dream, which rent apart the curtain of the future. This one therein a lord and huntsman seemed, chasing the wolf and wolfings toward the mount which hinders Pisans from beholding Lucca, with bitches lean and eager and well trained; for he had set before him in his van Gualandi with Sismondi and Lanfranchi. After a little run both father and sons seemed weary to me; then methought I saw their flanks torn open by sharp-pointed fangs. When, just before the morning, I awoke, I heard my children, who were with me there, sob in their sleep, and ask me for their bread. Cruel indeed thou art, if, thinking what my heart forebode, thou grievest not already; but that which thou canst not have heard, that is, for though Count Ugolino had the name of traitor to thee in thy castle-towns, thou shouldst not thus have crucified his sons. Their youthful age had made, thou modern Thebes, Brigata and Uguccione innocent, and the other two my canto names above. Further along we went, to where the ice roughly ensathes another class of people, not downward turned, but wholly on their backs. Weeping itself allows not weeping there, and tears, which find a barrier in their eyes, turn back, to cause their suffering to increase; because the first ones form a solid block, and thus like crystal visors wholly fill the hollow cup beneath the brow. And though, as in a callous spot, because of cold all feeling had departed from my face, it seemed to me that now I felt some wind; whence I to him: “My Teacher, who moves this? Is not all moving air quenched here below?” And he: “Ere long shalt thou be where thine eyes, Is not all moving air quenched here below?”

Ah, Pisa, foul reproach of those that dwell in that fair country where the si is heard; since slow thy neighbors are to punish thee, then let Caprara and Gorgona move, and make a hedge across the Arno’s mouth, that every person in thee may be drowned! for though Count Ugolino had the name of traitor to thee in thy castle-towns, thou shouldst not thus have crucified his sons. Their youthful age had made, thou modern Thebes, Brigata and Uguccione innocent, and the other two my canto names above. Further along we went, to where the ice roughly ensathes another class of people, not downward turned, but wholly on their backs. Weeping itself allows not weeping there, and tears, which find a barrier in their eyes, turn back, to cause their suffering to increase; because the first ones form a solid block, and thus like crystal visors wholly fill the hollow cup beneath the brow. And though, as in a callous spot, because of cold all feeling had departed from my face, it seemed to me that now I felt some wind; whence I to him: “My Teacher, who moves this? Is not all moving air quenched here below?” And he: “Ere long shalt thou be where thine eyes, seeing the cause which raineth down the blast, will make an answer to thee as to this.”

One of the wretches of the icy crust called out to us thereat: “O souls, so cruel, that unto you the last place is assigned, remove for me the hard veils on my face, that I may somewhat vent the pain that fills my heart, before the tears freeze up again.” Whence I to him: “If thou wouldst have me help thee, say who thou art; and should I not relieve thee, may I needs reach the bottom of the ice!” Then he: “I Frate Alberigo am,

I bit in anguish both my hands. And they, thinking it done because I craved to eat, immediately stood up, and said to me: ‘Father, much less shall we be pained, if us thou eat; thou with this wretched flesh dist cloth us, do thou, then, strip it from us now.’ Thereat, to sadden them no more, I calmed myself; through that day and the next we all kept mute. Ah, why, hard earth, dist thou not open up? Then Gaddo, when the fourth day we had reached, stretched himself out at length before my feet, and said: “My father, why dost thou not help me?” And there he died; and, ev’n as thou seest me, between the fifth day and the sixth I saw the three fall one by one; and, blind already, I gave myself to grooping over each, and two days called them, after they were dead; then fasting proved more powerful than pain.” When he had spoken thus, with eyes awry, he seized again the wretched skull with teeth, which for the bone were strong as are a dog’s. Ah, Pisa, foul reproach of those that dwell in that fair country where the si is heard; since slow thy neighbors are to punish thee, then let Caprara and Gorgona move, and make a hedge across the Arno’s mouth, that every person in thee may be drowned! for though Count Ugolino had the name of traitor to thee in thy castle-towns, thou shouldst not thus have crucified his sons. Their youthful age had made, thou modern Thebes, Brigata and Uguccione innocent, and the other two my canto names above. Further along we went, to where the ice roughly ensathes another class of people, not downward turned, but wholly on their backs. Weeping itself allows not weeping there, and tears, which find a barrier in their eyes, turn back, to cause their suffering to increase; because the first ones form a solid block, and thus like crystal visors wholly fill the hollow cup beneath the brow. And though, as in a callous spot, because of cold all feeling had departed from my face, it seemed to me that now I felt some wind; whence I to him: “My Teacher, who moves this? Is not all moving air quenched here below?” And he: “Ere long shalt thou be where thine eyes, seeing the cause which raineth down the blast, will make an answer to thee as to this.”

One of the wretches of the icy crust called out to us thereat: “O souls, so cruel, that unto you the last place is assigned, remove for me the hard veils on my face, that I may somewhat vent the pain that fills my heart, before the tears freeze up again.” Whence I to him: “If thou wouldst have me help thee, say who thou art; and should I not relieve thee, may I needs reach the bottom of the ice!” Then he: “I Frate Alberigo am, he of the evil garden’s fruit, who here for every fig I gave get back a date.”
Then “Oh!” said I, “art thou already dead?”
And he to me replied: “I have no knowledge how in the world above my body fares.
Such is the privilege of this Ptolomèa, that frequently a soul falls into it, ere Atropos have caused it to move on.
But that thou scrape more gladly from my face these glassy tears, know, then, that just as soon as any soul betrays, as I betrayed, its body is taken from it by a demon, who then takes charge of it, until its time be all revolved. Into a well like this it rushes headlong down; and so, perhaps, the body of the shade that winters here behind me, is still visible above.
This thou shouldst know, if just come down, for he Ser Branca d’ Oria is, and many years have now gone by, since he was thus shut up.”
“I think” said I, “that thou deceivest me, for Branca d’ Oria is not dead as yet, but eats, and drinks, and sleeps, and dons his clothes.”
“Above us, in the Malebranche’s ditch,” he said, “there, where the sticky pitch is boiling, not yet had Michel Zanche’s soul arrived, when in his stead this fellow left behind a devil in his body, as did also one of his kinsmen, who with him performed the treachery. But stretch thy hand here now, and ope mine eyes!” And yet I oped them not, for rudeness shown to him was courtesy.
Ah, Genoese! ye men estranged from all morality, and full of every vice, why from the earth are ye not wholly driven? for with the meanest spirit of Romagna, I found one such of you, that, for his deeds, in soul he bathes already in Cocytus, and seems in body still alive above.

34. The Ninth Circle. Treachery. Cocytus Traitors to their Benefactors. Lucifer

“The banners of the King of Hell advance toward us; now, therefore, look ahead of thee,” my Teacher said, “and see if thou perceive him.”
As, when a heavy fog is breathed abroad, or when at night our hemisphere grows dark, a windmill looks when seen from far away; even such a structure seemed I now to see; then, for the wind, I shrank behind my Leader, for other shelter was there none. I now — and ’t is with fear I put it into verse, — was where the shades were wholly covered up, and visible as is a straw in glass; some lying are; and some are standing up, one on his head, the other on his soles; one, like a bow, bends toward his feet his face. When we had gone so far ahead, that now it pleased my Teacher to reveal to me the Creature who once seemed so beautiful, he stepped from where he was in front of me, stopped me, and said: “Lo Dis, and lo the place, where thou must arm thyself with fortitude!”
How frozen and how weak I then became, ask thou not, Reader, for I write it not, because all speech would be of small avail. I did not die, nor yet remained alive; think for thyself now, hast thou any wit, what I became, of both of these deprived.
The Emperor of the Realm of Woe stood forth out of the ice from midway up his breast; and I compare more closely with a Giant, than merely with his arms the Giants do; consider now how great that whole must be, that with such parts as these may be compared. If, once as beautiful as ugly now, he still raised up his brows against his Maker, justly doth every woe proceed from him. Oh, what a marvel it appeared to me, when I beheld three faces to his head! One was in front of us, and that was red; the other two were to the latter joined right o’er the middle of each shoulder-blade, and met each other where he had his crest; that on the right twixt white and yellow seemed; the left one such to look at, as are those who come from there, where valeward flows the Nile. Under each face two mighty wings stretched out, of size proportioned to so huge a bird; sails of the sea I never saw so large. They had no feathers, but were like a bat’s in fashion; these he flapped in such a way, that three winds issued forth from him; thereby Cocytus was completely frozen up. With six eyes he was weeping, and his tears... and bloody slaver trickled o’er three chins.
In each mouth, as a heckle would have done,
a sinner he was crushing with his teeth,
and thus was causing pain to three of them.
To him who was in front of us the biting was nothing to the clawing, for at times his back remained completely stripped of skin.
“That soul up there which hath the greatest pain Judas Iscariot is,” my Teacher said, “who hath his head within, and plies his legs without. Of the other two, whose heads are down, Brutus is he who from the black snout hangs; see how he writhes, and utters not a word!
Cassius the other is, who so big-limbed appears. But night is coming up again, and now ’t is time to leave, for we ‘ve seen all.” Then, as it pleased him, I embraced his neck,
and he availed himself of time and place,
and when the wings were opened wide enough,
he firmly grasped the shaggy flanks, and then from tuft to tuft he afterward descended between the matted hair and frozen crusts.
When we were come to where the thigh turns round,
just at the thick part of the hips, my Leader with tiring effort and with stress of breath turned his head round to where his legs had been,
and seized the hair as one would who ascends;
hence I thought we were going back to Hell.
“Hold fast to me, for by such stairs as these” panting like one worn out, my Teacher said, “must such great wickedness be left behind.”
Then, through an opening in the rock he issued,
and, after seating me upon its edge, over toward me advanced his cautious step.
Raising mine eyes, I thought that I should still see Lucifer the same as when I left him;
but I beheld him with his legs held up.
And thereupon, if I became perplexed, let those dull people think, who do not see what kind of point that was which I had passed.
“Stand up” my Teacher said, “upon thy feet!
the way is long and difficult the road,
and now to middle-tierce the sun returns.”
It was no palace hallway where we were,
but just a natural passage under ground,
which had a wretched floor and lack of light.
“Before I tear myself from this abyss, Teacher,” said I on rising, “talk to me
a little, and correct my wrong ideas.
Where is the ice? And how is this one fixed thus upside down? And in so short a time how hath the sun from evening crossed to morn?” Then he to me: “Thou thinkest thou art still beyond the center where I seized the hair of that bad Worm who perforates the world.
While I was going down, thou wast beyond it;
but when I turned, thou then didst pass the point to which all weights are drawn on every side;
thou now art come beneath the hemisphere opposed to that the great dry land o’ercovers, and ’neath whose zenith was destroyed the Man, who without sinfulness was born and died;
thy feet thou hast upon the little sphere,
which forms the other surface of Judecca.
’T is morning here, whenever evening there;
and he who made our ladder with his hair,
is still fixed fast, ev’n as he was before.
He fell on this side out of Heaven; whereat,
the land, which hitherto was spread out here,
through fear of him made of the sea a veil,
and came into our hemisphere; perhaps to flee from him, what is on this side seen left the place empty here, and upward rushed.”
There is a place down there, as far removed from Beetzebub, as e’er his tomb extends,
not known by sight, but by a brooklet’s sound,
which flows down through a hole there in the rock, gnawed in it by the water’s spiral course, which slightly slopes. My Leader then, and I,
in order to regain the world of light, entered upon that dark and hidden path;
and, without caring for repose, went up,
he going on ahead, and I behind, till through a rounded opening I beheld some of the lovely things the sky contains;
thence we came out, and saw again the stars.