International Transfer Credit Policy for English Courses
Department of English

1) Students who want to transfer a writing course must meet with the undergraduate English advisor for a formal course evaluation. Students must provide a complete syllabus that outlines course objectives, assignment details, and course content; the undergraduate advisor may also require samples of student work. In order to successfully transfer English 100-level composition as equivalents to our ENGL 150 or 151, the syllabus and/or course description must show evidence of the following considerations: 1) multiple genres/forms; 2) rhetorical considerations; 3) peer response; and 4) revision. Writing courses that are not equivalents to ENGL 150 or 151 may transfer in as ENGL 1XX per undergraduate advisor evaluation.

2) Courses in learning English as a foreign language are not transferrable for English credit. The College of Arts & Sciences and the department understand these courses to be courses in learning a second or foreign language.

3) The department may transfer courses for ENGLISH (ENGL) credit that focus on the study of literature or film where the only language of instruction is English and the focus of the course is on the interpretation and analysis of literary texts (novels, poetry, etc. with no significant abridgements). Students must provide an original syllabus (in English, not translated) for the course and may need to conference with the course evaluator.

Undergraduate English & Film Studies Advisor
Kathleen Lacey, PhD
Andrews Hall 201B
402.472.3871
klacey3@unl.edu