

Software License Agreement and Term of Service

By using the software suite developed by LANDYNE, you (the end-user) agree that you understand and accept the terms and conditions stated below.

Disclaimer

Although we strive to ensure the reliability of the software suite, user should ensure the proper use of the software by inputting reasonable parameters to avoid errors or any unrealistic results. Therefore, both parties agree: the user has sufficient background knowledge and judgment capability for the results; we make no liability for any damages or losses resulting from the use of the software suite and related documentation.

Software License Agreement

1. LANDYNE software is not sold; rather, copies of the software are licensed to you.
2. You may freely download and distribute the LANDYNE software, which can be used in demo mode for evaluation.
3. Licenses can be purchased from LANDYNE. A price list will be provided on request. A validated license specifies the computer media (i.e., hard drive and flush drive) you run the software on.
4. When you request the software license, you agree to pay the license fee.
5. Once LANDYNE receives the payment, we will prepare the license files and sent to you within five days.
6. The software will continuously improve; only major upgrades will be marked as a version change. You need to pay only the price difference when you want to upgrade from the previous version to the new version.
7. You agree to give a proper reference to Landyne (<https://landyne.com>) when you use the software in your research work for publication.

Term of Service

- 1, LANDYNE provides support services, such as user manuals, tutorial videos, and consultation for software installation and usage.

2. LANDYNE will help users to gain basic background knowledge on the software application with suggestions on suitable textbooks and related papers if the services are required.
3. The license file is associated with the hard drive of the user's computer. LANDYNE will provide new license files at 50% of the original license fee if the user wants to install and run the software on a new computer media.
4. LANDYNE welcomes suggestions of new functions from the users' experience and the need in their research work. LANDYNE may add those new functions as patches in the current version or as upgrades in the next version, depending on the workload.