

Science Fiction Literature (English 206)

12:30-1:20 MWF

Bug-eyed monsters, evil robots, and time travel are just some of the devices utilized by science fiction to make statements about not only the future but also the past and the present. Often viewed as a white male genre, we move from history to the present to incorporate newer more diverse writers such as Joanna Russ, Sherman Alexie, Octavia Butler, and Margaret Atwood. From Afro-Futurism to zombie-like survivors or a pandemic, you are in for a wild ride!
