Surgical Sterilization, Regret, and Race: Contemporary Patterns

Julia McQuillan and Karina Shreffler

Julia McQuillan and Karina Shreffler will explore if sterilization is still more common and more consequential among Black, Latina, and Native American women compared to White women in the United States, and if the patterns are the same for all marginalized groups.

Julia McQuillan is Chair of the Sociology department at UNL. Karina Shreffler is an Associate Professor in the department of Human Development and Family Science at Oklahoma State University.
