WMNS 101: Introduction to Women’s and Gender Studies
WMNS 101 Andrews Hall 144 Class No. 4479
Section: 001 TuTh 11 a.m.-12:15 p.m. Credits: 3
Deb, Basuli ACE 9 Global/Diversity

This section of WMNS 101 will introduce students to basic concepts in the field of women and gender studies through the lens of transnational feminism. In other words, the course will offer insights into how our thinking about women and gender is transformed when we think across nations rather than through the nation. To explore our course topic we will use a strong interdisciplinary approach and include a diverse range of course material such as museum trips, presentations by guest speakers, images, films, performance poetry, and graphic literature. Placing students in the historical and cultural contexts from which our course material is drawn will enable them to understand the backdrop to the issues of transnational gender justice that this course attempts to introduce to students through migrant, immigrant, and refugee lives in the US as well as those lived by women elsewhere in the world.

The aim is to enable in students a basic understanding of women’s issues through a cross-cultural feminist perspective that will push them further to develop their critical thinking and reasoning about these issues. We will spend a considerable amount of time discussing the varied course material and issues related to them. The course will enable students to formulate convincing and coherent arguments through writing formal papers, informal writing, and a written exam, creative oral presentations, discussions, and other kinds of class participation. The ultimate purpose is to allow them to develop command over women’s and gender studies through a new branch of feminist analysis.

Section: 101

Kazyak, Emily

Class No.: 4480

Credits: 3

This interdisciplinary course is designed to introduce you to the study of sexuality with perspectives from lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer scholarship. You will engage with theoretical and empirical scholarship that addresses key topics in LGBT Studies, including: the changing historical configurations of same-sex desires and practices; regulations of bodies and sexuality by science, law, and culture; constructions of LGBTQ identities and communities; and histories of LGBTQ politics and activism. We will grapple with questions like: Have “heterosexuality” and “homosexuality” always existed? How do people make sense of their sexuality – and what shapes these understandings? What kinds of oppression or discrimination do people experience on the basis of sexual or gender identity? How do sexual minorities build communities and subcultures? How have sexuality and gender been intertwined? What are the current legal protections for sexual minorities — and how do those shape the relationships and families of LGBT people?

This course is divided into four sections. In the first section, we will consider the different ways that same-sex relationships have been understood in different cultures and historical time periods. In this section we will also consider the role that science has played (and continues to play) in shaping how we think about bodies, gender, and sexuality. In the second section of the course, we will focus on LGBT subcultures and activism starting in the early 20th century in the United States. The third part of the course focuses on the identities and experiences of contemporary gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, and straight individuals. In the last part of the course, we will focus on scholarship relevant to recent legal decisions and debates that are currently happening around sexuality. We discuss sexual privacy, marriage, and parenting. Throughout the course, we will consider the intersection between sexual identity and other axes of differences such as gender, race, class, geography, and religion.

- What would the history of the United States look like if we viewed it through the eyes of women?
- Is history gendered?
- Were women oppressed in history? Are they now?
- What can we learn about present-day issues related to women and gender by studying the past?

This course addresses these questions, and more, through surveying the ways in which women in the area of the present-day U.S. have experienced and given meaning to their history from around 1500 to the present. The class also examines gender as a system of power relations that has been integral to the shaping of American politics and public policy and the development of the American economy.

While learning about women and gender in history, the course also aims to impart some important reading, writing, and analytical skills that will be relevant to you in the rest of life. At the same time, this class aims to give you some insight into how historians do their work. Contrary to popular belief, the study of history is not really about memorizing dates and events. Instead it is about trying to understand the process of change over time. We will look at the sources historians use to recover the past and delve into interpretive debates that animate the field of history.

This course will tackle issues of global import that affect our lives here in Nebraska, investigating the roles gender plays in these complex topics. We will read about and meet people coming from around the globe who now live here in Lincoln, and discuss when people are allowed to move, when they are prevented from doing so, and when they are forced to leave through war, human trafficking, or other forms of violence. How does a person’s gender affect their access to food, water, transport, family integrity, physical safety, or economic opportunity? How do representations of masculinity and femininity shape our global community and our local one? Through guest speakers, film clips, readings, and a close eye on the news, this class will explore our global lives through a gendered lens.

Who is a woman of the Great Plains? Such a question frequently conjures up an image of a female with specific characteristics regarding her race, class, ethnicity, and religion as well as the place and time in which she lived. But these perceptions are often inaccurate. This new interdisciplinary online course—framed by humanistic and post-colonial perspectives—examines gender throughout time and space in the American and Canadian Great Plains. Various disciplines—such as anthropology, communication, economics, geography, history, literature, and sociology—inform explorations of gender in relation to the community, environment, politics, popular culture, social justice, work, and violence. The course will use personal narratives; print and digital copies of scholarly works, such as articles from Great Plains Quarterly and Plains Song Review; images from the Joslyn Art Museum website; digital projects from the Plains Humanities Alliance; and online resources from the Library of Congress and South Dakota State Historical Society Archives.

This course will explore historical and contemporary perspectives about science through the lens of sex (male vs. female) and gender (men vs. women). It will highlight specific accomplishments of women in science and describe potential barriers women may encounter as they pursue a career in science. The course offers an opportunity to explore a much broader view of science than classically presented. The online format will be multi-media “lectures“ and readings followed by in-class discussion of readings and topics through Discussion Board. Expectations include short writing assignments, a research paper of your choice on a related topic, and an interview of a female scientist.

Topics include theories on gender neuroplasticity, biological determinism, gender and scientific subjectivity and biases, race and cultural considerations, language and gender norms. Current statistics will be analyzed about women in various science disciplines and gender-related trends in early math and science education. Strategies for the inclusion of diverse participants in the process of science will be emphasized.

In recent decades, the study of human sexuality has emerged as among the most vibrant areas of scholarly inquiry, one which cuts across academic disciplines. Yet, for as knowledgeable as we are indeed becoming in this important area of inquiry, many are still surprised to discover that sexuality itself has a history all its own, one which bears little resemblance to the nostalgic (“such things didn’t happen in my day”) reconstructions of the past. Consequently, one of the primary goals of this upper-division course is to assess sexuality’s larger historical sweep, one which is not simply a tale of the march forward of “progress” (from the dark days of repression to today’s supposed tolerance and sexual liberation) but rather something much more complex.

Sexuality’s larger historical eras therefore—including, though certainly not limited to, the Age of Victorianism, the New Morality, as well as the Sexual Revolutions of the 1960s—constitute the course’s larger narrative framework. However, three topics in particular will serve as the course’s driving focus: the history of birth control (contraception and abortion); the history of homosexuality and gay and lesbian identities, communities, and practices; and the intersections between sex, art, and the media.

Please be advised that the reading and writing for this class is heavy. Requirements for the course include: extensive reading of primary and secondary sources (including several full-length books), several papers (both formal and informal), quizzes, an in-class written exam, and active participation in classroom discussion. Graduate students will be expected to fulfill several additional requirements.

Lincoln’s immigrant and refugee populations are growing, and UNL Honors students now have the opportunity to mentor students of all ages from these and US Native populations. This class offers a learning experience for all involved: as UNL students teach, coach, tutor, and guide their mentees in weekly meetings and class activities, helping them to adjust to the US, they will learn about global issues, cultures, histories, and life challenges faced by mentees and their families. In addition, mentees will learn about social services, language education, and legal and academic systems available in the community as pairs work to overcome barriers to success.
This course requires a year-long commitment: during the first semester, the class will be divided between class meetings and individual meetings of each mentor and mentee, while in the second semester, although UNL students will continue to meet in class and with their mentees, they may do so for variable credit.

*To obtain permission to register, please email Professor Mary Willis at mwillis2@unl.edu. Class

Phenomenon of the women’s (post)totalitarian experience in Central and Eastern Europe is to be examined across disciplines as the past continues to shape present in manifold ways. The course is a journey into the Central and East European female consciousness, as souls and values seem deeply impacted by the 20C fascist and communist experience. The totalitarian experience, examined through women’s memory, has significantly shaped Central and East European cultural and historical landscape. While the CEE region regains the status of cultural and political significance within Europe, the gaining cultural and academic freedom has given rise to re-imagining and re-writing en-gendered histories. What is the complexity of women’s experience of dehumanizing political practices? How powerful is the totalitarian spell over diverse classes and ethnicities of women? How women deal with the memory, hatred, and guilt? In the course various cases, and testimonies are to be examined; illustrations and comparisons are to be drawn; cultural, historical, and theoretical contexts discussed; films are to be watched to discuss the memory of women in the contemporary imagination. The course observes the women experience from the early victimization up to the development of gendered dissident leadership, which eventually contributed to the fall of totalitarianism, and to the era when conformity to the Soviet dominance is replaced by freedom and respect for human rights. The course also concerns a role of women in the European integration, and the position of CEE women in the world feminism.

Aim: The aim of this course is to look at a series of adult fairy tale films from a feminist perspective. We will study how much we emotionally invest in fairy tales as children and as adults and ask which films subvert the traditions of fairy tales? Which tales support stereotypes and which have mixed messages in terms of gender, race and class? What happens when girls and women are not seen as submissive helpless creatures in need of redemption, for example? How is masculinity challenged in modern fairy tales? Is heterosexuality subverted or enforced? Why are fantasy role models of every class, race and sexuality important? Why do we need fantasies such as clever women, warriors, and heroines that save lives and bring peace to their communities?

Why is virginity such a powerful trope in traditional fairy tales? How are filmmakers altering attitudes toward sexuality? What happens when women are in charge of their own sexuality? What are the dangers of fairy tales that have promote unattainable standards of beauty? Why are older women maligned as ‘crones’ rather than figures of wisdom and beauty? Why are girls and women taught to be competitive and uphold patriarchy by holding down other women? How can we widen the definition of a fairy tale? How are fairy tales redrawn from early legends and how they are tied to the struggles of Eros, Thanatos, Echo, Narcissus, and other mythological creatures?

Teaching Method: We begin class with a brief lecture. I point out things to watch for, such as themes, cultural references, subtexts, questions for analysis, etc. We study a number of tales for adults; some offer a feminist twist and others conform to stereotypes. Films studied in class include Catherine Breilhat’s BLUEBEARD, Julia Leigh’s SLEEPING BEAUTY, Aleksander Nordaa’s THALE, Jean Cocteau’s BEAUTY AND THE BEAST, Agnes Varda’s LE BONHEUR, Catherine Hardwicke’s RED RIDING HOOD and TWILIGHT, Rupert Sanders’ SNOW WHITE AND THE HUNTSMAN, Jaromil Jireš’ VALERIE AND HER WEEK OF WONDERS, and Robert Stromberg’s MALEFICENT. After the films, we discuss them as a group. Be prepared for discussions by taking careful notes.

Requirements: Weekly in-class film screenings, brief lectures, group discussion, weekly papers of 3 to 5 pages in length. You can expect to develop a vocabulary and knowledge of film studies, popular culture studies, women’s and gender studies, and Marxist feminist rhetoric. The most important part of this class is the post-screening discussions. I expect the entire class to have something of significance to say after the film, so make sure to take good notes on the films, readings and lectures. Perfect attendance and active participation are required.

Tentative Reading List: We will most likely read selections from: Fairy Tale Films: Visions of Ambiguity, and Fairy Tales, Myth, and Psychoanalytic Theory: Feminism and Retelling the Tale. We will read online articles such as “Rewriting Fairy Tales, Revisiting Female Identity: An Interview with Catherine Breillat.” Additional online readings are regularly posted on Blackboard and announced in class.

Esseks, Rosemary

This course is intended to explore various issues in human sexuality, from sexual anatomy and functioning to the various social issues associated with sexual behavior. Because this class explores many topics that evoke strong emotions, it is important to keep the following in mind:

- We all have the right to form and hold our own opinions on the issues discussed in class.
- Because others in class have the right to their own opinions, disagreements must be respectful.
- Class discussions will include presentation of research results, which may or may not support your opinions or mine. For exams and assignments you will be held responsible for remembering research information presented in class or in the text.

This course will explore some provocative and radical rhetorical approaches of women writers over, primarily, the last fifty years. We will reflect upon the rhetorical possibilities made visible by women writers who have taken on, re-imagined, and twisted traditional notions of what it means to write, to speak, and to be a woman in the first place. This course considers, as its central questions: How have women writers challenged and disrupted conventional categories of rhetoric and of gender? Who counts as “woman”? What do we mean when we use the term “rhetoric”? How do the writers of this course offer alternative ways of writing, thinking, knowing, and being? Why might these alternatives be essential to the study of reading and writing? These questions will not only shape our initial inquiries, but they will also generate additional questions that you will take up critically and creatively in your own rhetorical work.

Essential to any discipline is the theoretical framework upon which it is based. Essential also are the people who help create these ideas and put them into practice. As such, this course has two main objectives. First, we will begin the difficult (if not also life-long) task of acquainting ourselves with the massive body of scholarship upon which Women’s and Gender Studies rests: feminist theory. Reading, writing, and discussion of a wide range of theoretical texts will therefore constitute an important part of what we do. But we will also spend time acquainting ourselves with the many people (faculty, graduate students, and undergraduates) associated with this uniquely inter-disciplinary program, known to us as Women’s and Gender Studies.

For these reasons, although I will be leading the class more generally throughout the semester, the class will be broken down into three different sections (with the last 2 perhaps overlapping one another). The first third of the course will be led by me, in which I will lead discussions on critical feminist theory texts as a way to introduce students to key ideas and debates, thereby laying a foundation upon which to build. The second part of the class will feature Women’s and Gender Studies faculty members who will lead discussion on a feminist/gender theory text that profoundly influenced her/his own personal development: as an individual, citizen, and scholar. Among other things, this will make evident the ways in which theory influences practice -- in terms of what we choose to study, the questions we then ask, and how in turn we carry our research out. The last third will be devoted to student choice readings, where students get to pick a piece important to them and lead discussion on it. Through the course of the semester, therefore, we will read and write about a broad range of theoretical texts and struggle with them together; We will come to know each other on a personal and professional basis, forging important bridges upon which a scholarly community must be based; And we will get to see first-hand the ways in which knowledge is created and then applied, with the hopes of building a framework of our own, one which is informed by our many interdisciplinary perspectives.

Please be advised that the reading and writing load in this course is heavy. The call number is also suppressed. Should you wish to enroll, please contact me (Rose Holz) at rholz2@unl.edu.

Note: In order for this course to count toward the LGBTQ/Sexuality Studies minor, a significant portion of course content must be related to LGBTQ/Sexuality Studies. Before enrolling, check with an LGBTQ/Sexuality Studies advisor.

Permission of the WGS Director Chantal Kalisa mkalisa2@unl.edu or Associate Director Rose Holz rholz2@unl.edu is required in order to register for this course.

Students may gain practical knowledge in applying concepts learned in WGS classes in a service-learning opportunity with such organizations as Voices of Hope, Friendship Home, the YWCA, Planned Parenthood, and the ACLU. The internship will engage students with particular issues including workplace discrimination against women, prejudice faced by lesbian and gay couples, violence against women, and women’s reproductive health. Together with an on-site internship supervisor and a WGS faculty member, students will design and sign a contract that defines the number of hours to be spent at the organization, types of work, assignments, and how the student will be evaluated and graded. For more information, contact the WGS Director Chantal Kalisa mkalisa2@unl.edu or Associate Director Rose Holz rholz2@unl.edu.

HIST/WMNS 802: Sexuality in Nineteenth and Twentieth Century America

Holz, Rose

In recent decades, the study of human sexuality has emerged as among the most vibrant areas of scholarly inquiry, one which cuts across academic disciplines. Yet, for as knowledgeable as we are indeed becoming in this important area of inquiry, many are still surprised to discover that sexuality itself has a history all its own, one which bears little resemblance to the nostalgic (“such things didn’t happen in my day”) reconstructions of the past. Consequently, one of the primary goals of this upper-division course is to assess sexuality’s larger historical sweep, one which is not simply a tale of the march forward of “progress” (from the dark days of repression to today’s supposed tolerance and sexual liberation) but rather something much more complex.

Sexuality’s larger historical eras therefore—including, though certainly not limited to, the Age of Victorianism, the New Morality, as well as the Sexual Revolutions of the 1960s—constitute the course’s larger narrative framework. However, three topics in particular will serve as the course’s driving focus: the history of birth control (contraception and abortion); the history of homosexuality and gay and lesbian identities, communities, and practices; and the intersections between sex, art, and the media.

Please be advised that the reading and writing for this class is heavy. Requirements for the course include: extensive reading of primary and secondary sources (including several full-length books), several papers (both formal and informal), quizzes, an in-class written exam, and active participation in classroom discussion. Graduate students will be expected to fulfill several additional requirements.
ENGL 813: Film “Feminist Fairy Tale Films”

Aim: The aim of this course is to look at a series of adult fairy tale films from a feminist perspective. We will study how much we emotionally invest in fairy tales as children and as adults and ask which films subvert the traditions of fairy tales? Which tales support stereotypes and which have mixed messages in terms of gender, race and class? What happens when girls and women are not seen as submissive helpless creatures in need of redemption, for example? How is masculinity challenged in modern fairy tales? Is heterosexuality subverted or enforced? Why are fantasy role models of every class, race and sexuality important? Why do we need fantasies such as clever women, warriors, and heroines that save lives and bring peace to their communities?

Why is virginity such a powerful trope in traditional fairy tales? How are filmmakers altering attitudes toward sexuality? What happens when women are in charge of their own sexuality? What are the dangers of fairy tales that have promote unattainable standards of beauty? Why are older women maligned as ‘crones’ rather than figures of wisdom and beauty? Why are girls and women taught to be competitive and uphold patriarchy by holding down other women? How can we widen the definition of a fairy tale? How are fairy tales redrawn from early legends and how they are tied to the struggles of Eros, Thanatos, Echo, Narcissus, and other mythological creatures?

Teaching Method: We begin class with a brief lecture. I point out things to watch for, such as themes, cultural references, subtexts, questions for analysis, etc. We study a number of tales for adults; some offer a feminist twist and others conform to stereotypes. Films studied in class include Catherine Breillat’s BLUEBEARD, Julia Leigh’s SLEEPING BEAUTY, Aleksander Nordaas’ THALE, Jean Cocteau’s BEAUTY AND THE BEAST, Agnes Varda’s LE BONHEUR, Catherine Hardwicke’s RED RIDING HOOD and TWILIGHT, Rupert Sanders’ SNOW WHITE AND THE HUNTSMAN, Jaromil Jireš’ VALERIE AND HER WEEK OF WONDERS, and Robert Stromberg’s MALEFICENT. After the films, we discuss them as a group. Be prepared for discussions by taking careful notes.

Requirements: Weekly in-class film screenings, brief lectures, group discussion, weekly papers of 3 to 5 pages in length. You can expect to develop a vocabulary and knowledge of film studies, popular culture studies, women’s and gender studies, and Marxist feminist rhetoric. The most important part of this class is the post-screening discussions. I expect the entire class to have something of significance to say after the film, so make sure to take good notes on the films, readings and lectures. Perfect attendance and active participation are required.
Tentative Reading List: We will most likely read selections from: Fairy Tale Films: Visions of Ambiguity, and Fairy Tales, Myth, and Psychoanalytic Theory: Feminism and Retelling the Tale. We will read online articles such as “Rewriting Fairy Tales, Revisiting Female Identity: An Interview with Catherine Breillat.” Additional online readings are regularly posted on Blackboard and announced in class.

Graduate Seminar: Women, Gender, and Empire

This class will study the history of women, gender, and empire in comparative perspective. Key issues will include: “the intimacies of empire,” including interracial sex and marriage, childrearing, and domestic service in colonial settings; the role of western/white women in colonization; masculinity and empire; changes in indigenous gender systems with colonization; colonization of “the body;” the colonial control of sexuality and reproduction; the concern with hygiene and the role of science and medicine in colonization and empire; modernity, gender, and empire; and imperial representations of indigenous women and gender. Given the professor’s area of expertise, the course will compare in particular the history of women and gender in the North American West -- as a key site of settler colonialism -- with other colonial/imperial settings in the world, including Australia, Indonesia, Africa, Puerto Rico, and the Philippines. No prior knowledge of any of these areas of the world is required. This course counts as a Comparative/World seminar in the History graduate program and toward the graduate specialization in Women’s and Gender Studies for non-History students.
Course Objectives:

- To integrate gender into the study of empire and colonialism, and to bring insights from colonial and postcolonial studies to the study of gender
- To develop a comparative and global framework for the study of history
- To deepen students’ knowledge of major issues, debates, and themes in the study of gender and empire
- To promote the ability to critically evaluate and engage with primary historical sources
- To enhance student’s oral communication skills
- To cultivate students’ writing skills
- To create a classroom intellectual community that fosters respect for one another’s perspectives and promotes creative thinking

WGS Graduate Specialization or Graduate Minor Requirements

The Women’s and Gender Studies Program offers two degree options for graduate study. Both options provide students with a challenging opportunity to extend their graduate education in gender, sexuality, and diversity by drawing on the innovative interdisciplinary perspectives of Women’s and Gender Studies.

Successful completion of the specialization will be indicated on the student’s official transcript in parentheses following the name of the academic discipline. In those departments that already have internal specializations, students will pursue the Women’s and Gender Studies minor. Requirements are the same for both.

Women’s and Gender Studies graduate courses strengthen students’ qualifications for advanced graduate programs and for employment in their primary discipline or in a variety of occupations.

The graduate specialization and the graduate minor offer:

- a simultaneous focus on gender, race, ethnicity, class, ability, global feminism, and sexual orientation;
- an historical perspective on Women’s and Gender Studies as an area of scholarly inquiry, teaching, and activism both across and within disciplines;
- a challenge to the traditional separation of academic theory from political and professional practice;
- feminist perspectives and scholarship that challenge disciplinary barriers and paradigms;
- models of scholarship, pedagogy, and professional activity that prepare students for employment in a variety of professions related to women’s and gender issues;
- mentoring by faculty recognized for interdisciplinary research and teaching in subjects related to women and gender.

For information about how to apply for the WGS graduate specialization/minor and a list of courses eligible for credit, see http://www.unl.edu/wgs/graduate/requirements.shtml. For more information about the WGS program, including faculty, see http://www.unl.edu/wgs/.

Master’s Degree Program Requirements:

1. A master’s degree in another UNL department.
2. Nine credit hours of graduate courses on women, gender, and/or sexuality outside the student’s major department. The WGS minor or specialization may be gained through any combination of 4/800, 800, or 900 level courses. Under Graduate College rules, both Options I and II offer possibilities for completing the graduate specialization or minor without adding additional hours of course work.

3. If option I (thesis) is chosen, the thesis must address some issue(s) relevant to Women’s and Gender Studies. The student must deposit a copy of the thesis with Women’s and Gender Studies.

4. Confirmation to the Women’s and Gender Studies office that all requirements for the specialization or minor have been met by the middle of the final semester.

Doctrinal Degree Program Requirements:

1. A doctoral degree in another UNL department.

2. Twelve* credit hours of courses on women, gender, and/or sexuality outside the student’s major department. The WGS minor or specialization may be gained through any combination of 4/800, 800, or 900 level courses. Under Graduate College rules, both Options I and II offer possibilities for completing the graduate specialization or minor without adding additional hours of course work.

3. Transfer Courses: Transferred courses accepted by the major department may be used toward this total upon approval of the WGS Director and Advisory Board. Contact the Director for information on the documentation required for this approval. Transferred courses may count for up to three hours of the total twelve.

4. A PhD student who has already done an MA graduate specialization in WGS at UNL is required to take only six credits (two additional classes) outside her/his department in addition to the nine hours already completed in pursuit of the MA.

5. The dissertation should address some issue(s) relevant to Women’s and Gender Studies. The student must deposit a copy of the dissertation with Women’s and Gender Studies.

6. Confirmation to the Women’s and Gender Studies office that all requirements for the specialization or minor have been met by the middle of the final semester.

*Although most PhD minors require 15 credit hours, the WGS minor, like the specialization, requires only 12.
